EXPLOSION AT CELANESE INJURES 42 EMPLOYEES

Roosevelt Orders Miners Back to Work

President May Use Troops or Draft Strikers

Drastic Measures Indicated If Men Are Not in Pits Monday

Sweeping Order Supports War Labor Board's Latest Ruling

WASHINGTON, June 3 (AP)—President Roosevelt, acting as war-time commander-in-chief, today issued orders to return to work Monday—and drastic measures were reported in store in case they disobey.

Backing to the limit the War Labor Board which John L. Lewis has defied, Mr. Roosevelt said that when the miners return to their war duties, the disposition of the dispute "will forthwith proceed, under the jurisdiction of the War Labor Board and in accordance with the customary and established procedures governing all cases of this kind."

The president made no mention of what he would do if the strike continued—in fact his terse statement did not seem to recognize even a possibility that the order could be ignored.

May Use Troops

Responsible sources said he was likely to resort to use of troops, the war laws and other measures if necessary.

Moreover, it was stated on high authority that the government is considering seriously the question of whether men who have struck would be entitled to any retroactive pay increase which might eventually be agreed upon.

No decision has been reached on this point, but it may be referred to Attorney General Biddle for a ruling. Government officials are inclined to the view that miners who strike may have cancelled the promise of a retroactive feature in any new contract.

May Lose Large Sum

The miners' contract expired on April 1, and if a retroactive increase is denied it would mean the loss of considerable money to the men.

Early tonight the United Mine Workers Policy committee adjourned a prolonged session without any action on the strike and union officials flatly declined to comment on the president's back-to-work order.

Lewis attended the session except for a short interval during which he left the hotel for an undisclosed purpose. Reporters informed him of the president's order but he said "no comment."

Mine Leaders Silent

As the meeting ended, an official UMW spokesman said "we won't give any statement. Nothing at all tonight."

The president's order, issued late in the day, apparently ushered in a long-awaited showdown with Lewis, who as president of the United Mine Workers has refused to recognize the War Labor Board's decision and has called it "unlawful."

Mr. Roosevelt's statement said:

"Most of the nation's coal mines are closed because of a general strike which has taken place in defiance of the government of the United States. I have instructed the secretary of the interior, who has possession of the mines for the government, to proceed to reopen the mines."

San Berry Sues Charles Chaplin

LOS ANGELES, June 3 (AP)—A writ of habeas corpus was filed today charging that film comedian Charles Chaplin is the father of the unborn child of Joan Berry, 23, movie aspirant who was recently arrested after a disturbance at the actor's home.

The suit was filed by the young man's mother, Mrs. Gertrude E. Berry, as guardian of the unborn child.

The suit asks $10,000 for pre-natal care, $5,000 court costs and $50 per month for support of the unborn infant.

Suspect Held In Murder of Five on Farm

William Clatterback Ac- cused of Brutal Virginia Killings

LEESBURG, Va., June 3 (AP)—Commonwealth's Attorney Charles F. Harrison, of Loudoun county, said tonight he had obtained the "full and complete confession" of Thomas William Clatterback, 33, of near Hillsboro, admitting the slaying of all five victims in the Love murder case.

LEESBURG, Va., June 3 (AP)—Loudoun County Sheriff S. P. Alexander said today that Thomas William Clatterback, 33, of near Hillsboro, had been arrested on a warrant charging him with the murder of A. Morris Love, prominent Loudoun farmer, and four other persons at the Love farm Tuesday.

Clatterback, a roadbuilder, was reported to have been taken into custody by police at his home last night. Commonwealth's Attorney Charles F. Harrison, of Leesburg, asked immediately for additional information, which the sheriff said he lacked.

Love, his wife, their son, James, and a tenant couple on their farm, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Russell, were found late Tuesday afternoon bludgeoned and shot to death when a salesman went to Love's northern Virginia farm to make a routine delivery.

The salesman, Worth Blevins, reported to police that he had seen an automobile leave the farm just before he entered.

The car, Blevins told police, turned toward Hamilton, a county village, and he was unable to identify the driver or determine whether one or more than one person was in the machine.

Blevins found Love's body seated in a chair on the front porch of his farmhouse. His skull had been crushed. Inside, he found the bodies of Mrs. Love and the son. Both had rifle wounds in the heart and the young man had been bludgeoned.

Blevins called police and when they arrived they found the bodies of the Russells behind a barn about 150 yards from the Love's house. Russell had been shot in the heart.

Administration Forces Launch Drive for Law against Strikes

WASHINGTON, June 3 (AP)—Administration forces launched a vigorous drive in the House today for enactment of legislation aimed primarily at halting the current coal strike and to sidetrack a more stringent measure reported by the Military committee.

Their drive was gaining impetus as the House put off further consideration of the legislation until tomorrow after five hours of acrimonious debate had resulted in a complicated parliamentary tangle.

Italian Convoy Badly Smashed By Allied Fleet

British and Greek Warships Rip Foes' Ships To Shreds

By DANIEL De LUCE
ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, June 3 (AP)—Striking at the heart of Italy's sea communications, daring British and Greek destroyers, attacked an enemy convoy off Capo Spartivento at the toe of the Italian boot Tuesday night and ripped it to shreds without themselves suffering either casualties or damage.

In defiance of the big guns of the Italian fleet, the straight-shooting Allied warships wiped out two Axis merchant vessels and an escorting torpedo boat and sent an enemy destroyer aground, burning fiercely. One Greek destroyer participated in the attack.

Smashing the Italian coastal convoy, coming on the heels of two heavy bombardments of Pantelleria island by British warships, indicated that the Allies have gained naval supremacy in Italy's southern waters to match their domination of the air over the Mediterranean. In raids on Pantelleria and the southwest coast of Sardinia yesterday American air forces from North Africa did not lose a single plane. Capo Spartivento, where the enemy convoy was ambushed, stands at the southern approach to the strait of Messina, the narrow passageway between Sicily and the Italian mainland through which all shipping between the Italian east and west coast must thread its way.

Particulars of the one-sided engagement remained to be told. A communiqué from the headquarters of General Dwight D. Eisenhower disclosed only the extent of the enemy's losses and the remarkable fact that the victory was achieved without the loss of a ship or injury to an Allied crewman.

One of the sunken Axis merchant ships, the communiqué said, blew up after being set afire by guns of the Allied destroyers.

An Italian communiqué heard here from the Rome radio reported that "the enemy renewed its bombing actions against Pantelleria from the air and from the sea." This apparently was the

Work or Fight, Governor Orders

MONTGOMERY, Ala., June 3 (AP)—Gov. Chauncey Sparks issued a "work or fight" order today, directing the reclassification of all men who have occupational deferment but who are not at work on the jobs for which they were deferred by 3 p. m. tomorrow.

Sparks said his order which was given to Lt. Col. James T. Johnson, Jr., state selective service director, would affect "miners or any other group or individual," and added that once a man loses his occupational deferment it would not be reinstated.

Col. Johnson said the number of men having occupational deferments averaged two to three per cent throughout the state, but he had no definite estimate as to the number who would be affected by the order. A "conservative" estimate of miners affected would be about 500, he said.

"This is a work or fight order," Sparks said, "but I'm giving all men who have occupational deferments opportunity to get back on their jobs. If they do not by 3 o'clock tomorrow, they will be subject to induction."

ROOSEVELT REPORTED READY TO DRAFT STRIKING MINERS

Selective Service Authorities Says President Has Power To Use Law To End Strike

WASHINGTON, June 3 (AP)—Authorities on the selective service act said tonight President Roosevelt clearly could use it, if he found advisable, to put pressure on the striking coal miners to return to work.

The president's back-to-work order made no mention of penalties for disobedience, but responsible quarters said he was prepared to make use of the draft law as well as other measures, if necessary.

(Governor Prentice Cooper of Tennessee authorized local draft boards in his state to reclassify miners who remain away from their jobs, and Governor Chauncey Sparks of Alabama directed reclassification of all men who have occupational deferment but who are not on the jobs for which they are deferred by 3 p. m. tomorrow.)

Selective service headquarters said Draft Director Lewis B. Hershey had not yet received any official notice of Cooper's and Sparks' actions, and would not have any comment on them, at least until official word is received.

Draft Regulations Quoted

Officials pointed out, however, that draft regulations provide that local boards may be directed summarily to reclassify any draft age man is available for immediate military service, regardless of whether he has been deferred for dependency or on occupational grounds. Furthermore, although men past their 38th birthday are not being taken now in the draft, reclassification, under the regulations, could be ordered for a man who had not passed his forty-fifth birthday at the time he was registered regardless of his present age.

Authority to direct summary reclassification has been claimed by Hershey in at least two notices to local boards. The last was sent out only two months ago, but selective service officials said no attempt had been made thus far to exercise it.

Must Back War Effort

"Whenever the director of selective service advises the local board that a deferred registrant is not supporting or is adversely affecting the war effort or the national health, safety or interest, the local board shall immediately terminate the deferment of and consider (Continued on Page 14, Col. 4)

Truman B. Cash Named Successor To Mary Risteau

State Central Chairman Appointed Small Loan Administrator

ANNAPOLIS, Md., June 3 (AP)—Democratic State Central Committee Chairman Truman B. Cash was appointed by Governor O'Connor today to be state small loans administrator, succeeding Miss Mary E. W. Risteau.

Miss Risteau, one of the women most active in Maryland public life for a number of years, had held the job since its creation in May of 1939, after the General Assembly had abolished the old office of commissioner of small loans and substituted the administrator of loan laws.

Served in State Senate

Miss Risteau, a native of Harford county, was the first woman ever to serve in the state House of Delegates and the only woman ever to serve in the state Senate.

Cash, whose home is in Westminister, will assume the duties of the $4,000-a-year position on June 15.

Governor O'Connor made a number of other appointments today, including:

Robert France, chairman of the state tax commission, was appointed for a full term in the office in which he recently succeeded William L. Henderson, now a member of the Baltimore city supreme bench.

Terrific Blast Rocks

Gigantic Plant; Loss

May Reach $200,000

Only Four Seriously Injured among Many Taken to Hospitals; Six Buildings and Inter-Connecting Duct Badly Damaged; Power Failure Blamed for Tragedy by Company Officials

Forty-two persons were injured, according to state police records, four of them seriously, late yesterday afternoon in an explosion which rocked the Celanese Corporation plant five miles from Cumberland. No one was killed in the blast which company officials said was caused by a power failure.

The explosion, which was felt and heard distinctly in Cumberland, badly damaged the inter-connecting duct works and six buildings housing the spinning section and the acetone recovery department, Fred T. Small, plant manager, said last night.

MAKING PLANT SAFE

Small added that there has been no estimate of the damage because "we have been too busy making the rest of the plant safe."

Sgt. Truman Moon, of the state police, said, however, that a company official told him he did not believe the loss would be in excess of $200,000.

Most seriously injured were:

Melvin Emerick, 32, Corriganville, very badly burned about the body. He was given blood plasma at Allegany hospital where he was admitted. Condition serious.

Garland Athey, 25, 214 Springdale street, badly burned about the body, head and face. He received a blood transfusion at Allegany hospital.

Elmer Bittner, 29, 39 Mill street, Frostburg, badly burned about the body. He was admitted to Allegany hospital. Condition serious.

Harry Stafford, 30, Lonaconing, badly burned about his face, body and legs, laceration of his right leg, shock. He was admitted to Memorial hospital. Condition fair.

21 Taken to Hospital

Of the forty-two persons injured, twenty-one received treatment in Allegany and Memorial hospitals while the others were given medical attention at the first aid station at the plant. Ten men were taken to Memorial hospital but nine were discharged after receiving treatment. Eleven men were taken to Allegany hospital and one was discharged after he received treatment.

The explosion rocked the plant and other sections of the county for several miles around but the exact time the blast occurred could not be learned. Company officials said, however, that it occurred between 4:15 and 4:20 p. m.

Fires Break Out

Fires broke out after the blast and the combination of fire and concussion caused most of the injuries in the three spinning blocks and the acetone recovery department. Flying glass was responsible for cuts that many of the injured suffered.

There were two power failures during the afternoon, one at 1:45 o'clock and another thirty-five minutes later. Small said the power failures caused the plant to be shut down and added that "certain precautions" must be taken for protection when that happens. He explained that if "you don't throw away vapors" a hazard is created. "We had a hot spot," he said.

The "hot spot" started in the duct works, the distribution center to the entire plant, and spread to the acetone recovery department and the three spinning blocks, Small added.

Several workmen in the affected buildings said the blast was set off when a repairman using an acetylene torch was working on a pipe carrying acetone. This report, however, has not been confirmed.

Despite the damage, Small said a large section of the plant will not be shut down, and last night Edward R. Allan, personnel director, issued a notice to all employees about reporting for work.

All employees of the spinning department, spinning engineers and

Italian Navy Fears To Come Out and Fight

Mussolini Taking No Chances with Remainder of Sea Forces

By GLENN BABE
Associated Press Staff Writer

The Italian navy, which Mussolini declined to risk in any attempt to rescue the Axis armies of North Africa, still is playing it safe. Having abandoned the waters off Tunisia long before the land battle was over, it appears now to be under orders to quit also the Mediterranean narrows, leaving to the British even the seas which wash the foot of the Italian boot.

Admiral Cunningham's ships appear to have established a dominance in those waters which matches the American-British command of the skies. They apparently are able to bombard Pantelleria, outermost of Italy's island outposts, at will and with little risk of damage. Two heavy shelling this week brought only light reaction from the shore, none from the sea. Wednesday the British fleet darted in close to the Italian mainland to smash a convoy off Capo Spartivento. This indicates that British surface forces are able to deny use of the Messina channel, through which ships must pass from one Italian coast to the other.

Blow to Mussolini
A comparable situation would be one in which an enemy surface fleet was able to shell our Caribbean bases with impunity and prevent ship movements from the Gulf of Mexico to the Atlantic between Florida and Cuba.

Such is the seeming helplessness of the navy which Il Duce used to boast would make the Mediterranean Italy's mare nostrum as it was in the days of Rome's real power.

This continued inactivity raises the question of what ultimate mission may be reserved for Il Duce's fleet. His country lies under the shadow of imminent invasion. Roundabout French-Spanish reports published in London say the Italian navy is "prepared to steam into battle at an hour's notice." But this is not convincing.

Allies Prefer Battle
There is reason to doubt whether Mussolini will hazard his navy—perhaps three or four sound battle-ships and a handful of light cruisers—until the very last moment, when no further withdrawal is possible.

One reason for such conjecture is the fact that nothing would suit the Allies' purposes better than for the Italians to come out and fight. There is no doubt that Admiral Cunningham disposes of sufficient power to destroy whatever force comes within range of his guns.

The Italian fleet, even while it skulks in its northern bases, has far more value than a fleet at the bottom of the sea. It is that important naval factor, a fleet in being.

Obviously the southern Italian bases no longer are usable for the main fleet units. The two principal bases on the west coast already have been bombed by Allied heavy bombers, Spezia by the RAF from Britain and Leghorn by General Doolittle's Flying Fortress from North Africa. Trieste, at the head of the Adriatic already is within at least theoretical range of the big American planes.

Of course there may be reasons other than strategic considerations for the self-effacement of the Italian sea forces. Many of the best ships have taken heavy punishment since 1940 and how many are fit for action is a question. There may be a shortage of fuel. There also may be a shortage of fighting spirit.

Japanese Attempt To Burn Forests

Big Appropriation Planned To Combat Enemy Plot in Northwest

WASHINGTON, June 4 (AP)—Told of three isolated Japanese attempts to bomb or shell forest areas in the Pacific northwest, a Senate appropriations subcommittee voted today to recommend appropriations totaling $12,217,000 to prevent and extinguish forest fires.

Chairman Russell (D-Ga.) said the subcommittee voted to increase from $2,765,000 to $5,917,000 the amount allowed by the house for national forest protection, and increased from $2,492,000 to $6,300,000 the House allowance for protection of state and private forests.

Forest service officials told an executive session of the subcommittee that a Japanese submarine once shelled an area in South Oregon and two submarine-launched planes flew over that vicinity, one dropping a bomb which caused a minor fire.

Beforehand, Mr. Roosevelt had announced Davies was taking a highly secret letter to Stalin for him, and had warned reporters against speculating over its contents because, he said, they would be wrong.

Nevertheless, speculation persisted with much of it centering about the idea that the communication involved a suggestion for a personal meeting.

2,000,000 Tons Of Coal Is Lost Daily by Strike

Reports from 18 States Show War Plants Are Closing

PITTSBURGH, June 3 (AP)—The three-day-old walkout of the nation's miners is causing a daily tonnage loss of more than 2,000,000 tons, unofficial reports from eighteen coal producing states disclosed today, as industrial supplies diminished and curtailment of production appeared probable in the foremost war metal—steel.

The first blast furnace was shut down at Birmingham, Ala., by the Republic Steel Corporation, whose officials notified the government the cause was an inadequate coal supply.

Production Will Drop
Spokesmen for steelmakers in Pittsburgh said that even if coal digging is resumed Monday, production would drop because of the fast-vanishing supplies.

In Chicago, a coal source said "loss of ten days coal would cause spotty damage" in that great industrial area, "and by the end of next week the situation would be serious." A survey showed the "no contract, no work" slogan of the United Mine Workers in effect tighter than ever. Only in Kentucky and Illinois were there an appreciable number of men at work. A half million or more men remained idle.

In Kentucky, 14,000 men, mostly non-union, were at their posts. In Illinois, stronghold of the AFL Progressive Miners, the number working was estimated at 10,800.

First Picket Line
In West Virginia, biggest bituminous coal producing state, the first picket line showed up in Harrison county and closed a small strip mine. UMW district 31 headquarters at Fairmont, W. Va., reported several maintenance men had joined the walkout through dissatisfaction over the progress in negotiations at Washington.

Tension increased in the vast coal regions of West Virginia and Pennsylvania as events neared a showdown between President Roosevelt and John L. Lewis of the Mine Workers Union. Growing restlessness was evident, as miners had their victory gardens in shape and apparently were getting tired of idling.

Food Conference Comes to an End

Members Confident They Have Advanced the Day of Victory

HOT SPRINGS, Va., June 3 (AP)—The United Nations food conference closed today with adoption of a program aimed at paving the way toward a world free from want and expressions of confidence that the parley's work had brought nearer the day of victory.

The program was embodied in a declaration of principles and thirty resolutions which charged governments with responsibility for promoting such agricultural and food distribution programs as would help all peoples toward a standard of nutrition that would make them, in the words of the United States delegate, "strong enough to be free."

The most immediate tangible result of the conference promised to be early establishment in Washington of an interim international agricultural authority to guide a program for world abundance.

Speakers at the brief final sessions emphasized that this was only the beginning of a drive to secure adequate food for all men, and that meanwhile the urgent task was to win the war and save millions of people from tyranny and starvation.

Chairman Richard Law of the British delegation, in moving the adoption of the "final act" embodying all conference recommendations, said "there is not one of us here who will live to see the end of our work."

Soviet Russia's chief delegate, Alexey D. Krutikov, likewise stressed that "the future will judge" the conference and its recommendations; but added it was already safe to say that by strengthening the collaboration of the United Nations the food parley "has brought near the victorious termination of the war."

LADY CLIPPER PAYS $136.40 AT WHEELING

WHEELING, W. Va., June 3 (AP)—Lady Clipper, a favorite here last year but lightly regarded today, ran Silk Spotter into the dirt in the stretch and paid off sixteen backers $136.40 on each $2 mutual ticket. It was the longest price on a winner since racing was resumed at the Downs.

Lady Clipper also paid $56.40 for place and $10.60 for show. The daily double combination of Lady Clipper and Not Alone paid $272.80.

Lalage, after two former starts in which he threatened the leaders, won the fourth just as Governor M. M. Neely entered the park for the running of the Governor's Purse. He paid $12.60. Ida time, winner of the fifth, returned $14.80 and El Brush paid $36 in the seventh.

Cincinnati Beats Boston 7 to 4

CINCINNATI, June 3 (AP)—A four-run Cincinnati uprising in the eighth inning saved a ball game for a wild Johnny Vander Meer tonight as the Reds downed the Boston Braves, 7 to 4.

Vandy walked eight men and was bailed out of embarrassing spots twice by careless Boston baserunning. He compensated somewhat by fanning six and getting a pair of singles on his own.

The Braves had the Reds 4 to 3 and Alva Javery seemed set for a tame victory when the last half of the eighth came up. Then Frank McCormick doubled off the scoreboard and Jim Tobin relieved Javery.

Steve Mesner singled to center and Max Marshall got a hit on his infield tap, filling the bases. Eric Tipton hit the scoreboard for another double, scoring McCormick and Mesner, and Lonney Frey singled Marshall and Tipton in.

The Braves might have sewed the game up in their eighth after Eddie Joost walked and Connie Ryan bunted safely. But Joost was picked off second and despite two more walks Boston scored only once.

Americans Help Chinese Armies Drive Japs Back

Invaders Driven to River Near Great Base of Ichang

By SPENCER MOOSA

CHUNGKING, CHINA, June 3 (AP)—Supported by an American-Chinese air force which dominated the Central China skies and was shooting Japanese planes down at the rate of 14 to 1, the Chinese armies swept tonight to the south bank of the Yangtze and were separated only by that great river from the main Japanese base of Ichang in Hupeh province.

Farther down the river, other Chinese troops were declared in a special communique of Chiang Kai-Shek's command to have trapped 45,000 of the Japanese invaders—30,000 of whom were officially declared already to have fallen as casualties.

In yet another drive in the counter-offensive now throwing the Japanese back all along the upper Yangtze front, Chinese columns crossed into Hupeh from Hunan province, said the high command, and surrounded the Japanese position of Kunguan, this some seventy miles southeast of Ichang.

The main drive on Ichang, which had advanced thirty-two miles within less than a week, earlier had overrun and recaptured the towns of Changyang and Chialiang, respectively twelve and thirty-five miles south of that base.

So complete was American-Chinese mastery aloft that in two days Allied pilots had destroyed a minimum of twenty-eight Japanese planes, and probably thirty-six, against two Allied planes lost. Another bomber got twenty Japanese planes in a single action.

This air support, the most effective ever given the Chinese armies, was carried on to cut up the retreating invader. On a single avenue of Japanese retreat, the road back from Changyang, Chinese dispatches estimated that Allied planes alone had killed more than 1,500 enemy troops struggling on the ground.

Share the Liquor Plan Promised in West Virginia

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 3 (AP)—Liquor Commissioner Carl G. Bachmann promised whiskey consumers of his state a rationing plan on an "equitable, impartial, share and share alike" basis in an address tonight outlining procedure which starts with registration on July 13.

In a fifteen-minute radio talk over station WCHS, Charleston, Bachmann set forth the reasons for rationing, how other states were meeting the problem, and the methods now employed which he said were eliminating non-resident buyers and bootleggers from the market reserved for West Virginians. Citizens now may buy one unit of fermented or distilled beverage each week, and limitations are imposed through stamping the customer's war ration book No. 2.

swimmers disappeared, but the other two managed to get aboard life rafts dropped from the plane.

Because of the roughness of the sea, the plane was unable to maintain contact with the life raft, the navy said, and no report has been received of the landing of any survivors.

The navy said the U-boat was destroyed "several months ago" after it was sighted by aviation machine gunners. The U-boat was a German type, fully surfaced and some crew members lying on the deck in the sun.

His Son in Army, Miner Refuses To Join Strike

Charles Hartman Says Both He and His Boy Have Job To Do

UNIONTOWN, Pa., June 3 (AP)—Charles Hartman, 50-year old strapping six footer, carried on his self-styled "one man rebellion" against the coal strike today, going into the mine at the Palmer works of the H. C. Frick Coke Company near here for the third straight day.

Leaving to go to work on the 3 p. m. shift—he has been the only coal digger to report since the walkout started on Tuesday—he said:

"My boy was sent to Africa to a job and I've got a job to do here. I worked in 1941 when the miners went out and I'm going to work now. I think most of the men will go back anyway."

"President Roosevelt is bigger than John L. Lewis and the men are going to find that out if they don't already realize it now."

Mrs. Hartman, a kindly, gray-haired woman, expressed some concern over her husband's determination to work.

"But," she said, "he's working because our boy is over there"—referring to Sergeant James Hartman of the Army Air Corps.

Stimson Hints Of Attack Soon On Japan Proper

Secretary of War Indicates U. S. Will Launch Air Raids

By W. H. MOBLEY

WASHINGTON, June 3 (AP)—Secretary of War Stimson gave an off-handed indication today of attacks to come on the territory of Japan proper, and the navy emphasized it shortly afterward with a report of further mopping-up operations on Attu island in the Aleutians and an air attack on the now-isolated Japanese base at Kiska.

Secretary Stimson's comment, limited to the casual, matter-of-fact remark that the virtually completed recapture of Attu puts American forces "in striking distance of Japanese territory," came in his regular press conference.

He would go no further, turning away requests for elaboration with the remark that "it's a pretty long distance" from the regained American position in the Western Aleutians to the Japanese bases in the Kuriles, some 800 miles away.

Stimson said the Axis now holds 17,063 American prisoners officially reported through the international Red Cross, with Japan holding 11,307, Germany 3,312 and Italy 2,464. There probably are many others not yet officially reported by name.

He told reporters that the Attu fighting passed its peak on May 28 and 29, with American seizure May 28 of positions overlooking Chichagof harbor and repulse the following day of a fierce counter-attack that penetrated as far as the advance regimental command post and required use of American reserves.

The navy communique told of more aerial activity in the South Pacific as well as the raid on Kiska and cleaning out of small groups of Japanese on Attu. It said large fires were left burning at Tinian harbor and Numa Numa harbor on Bougainville and two small ships were attacked, one of them being beached.

committee bill and the substitute. So involved was the parliamentary situation that members clamored to know what they were being called to vote on and demanded that further action be postponed until they could hear the various proposals.

Unoffered but ready for submission tomorrow was a bill by Representative Ramspeck of Georgia, Democratic whip, aimed chiefly at the coal strike and openly supported by administration forces headed by Majority Leader McCormack of Massachusetts.

Ramspeck's bill is similar in most provisions to the Senate-approved Connally bill, for which the House Military committee substituted its own legislation. It provides principally that when the government has taken over a plant, it shall be unlawful for anyone to:

"Coerce, instigate, or induce any person to interfere, by lock out, strike, slow down, or other interruption, with the operation of such business establishment, plant, mine, or facility, or to aid any such lock-out, strike, slow down, or other interruption x x x by giving direction or guidance in the conduct of such interruption or by providing funds for the conduct or direction thereof or for the payment of strike unemployment, or other benefits to those participating therein."

Its effect, its backers said, would be to make it illegal for union officials to direct a strike or to use union funds to carry on a strike.

Violations of the prohibition would be punishable by one year imprisonment and a fine of $5,000. Refusal of an individual to work would not constitute a violation.

No Third Term Resolution Is Strongly Urged

Senate Move Supported by Both Democrats and Republicans

WASHINGTON, June 3 (AP)—With the declaration that "this is no political gesture," Senator Bailey (D-NC) introduced in the Senate today a resolution proposing a constitutional amendment to limit the tenure of future presidents to two terms.

While Bailey, a southern Democrat of conservative views, quickly pointed out that the resolution is so framed as not to affect a possible bid by President Roosevelt for a fourth term, other legislators said privately that great political significance is likely to be attached to any action Congress might take upon it.

Within thirty minutes after the resolution had been offered, Chairman Van Nuys (D-Ind.) of the Judiciary committee announced it had been assigned to a subcommittee headed by Senator McCarran (D-Nev.), who in the past has been critical of some of Mr. Roosevelt's policies. Other members include Senators Connally of Texas and McFarland of Arizona, Democrats who ordinarily support administration proposals, and Senators Austin of Vermont and Ferguson of Michigan, Republicans.

One Democratic supporter of the resolution, who declined to be quoted by name, said there is no doubt a majority of the sub-committee favors the measure, adding that a nose count showed ten of the eighteen members of the full committee are likely to join in reporting it out after what Van Nuys predicted would be "lengthy" hearings.

Bailey's resolution specified that the amendment could be adopted only by two-thirds vote of both houses and subsequent approval by three-fourths of the state legislatures within a seven-year period.

New Committee Brings Harmony To Free French

De Gaulle and Giraud Get Together in Algiers; Appoint Aides

By EDWARD KENNEDY

ALGIERES, June 3 (AP)—A "French committee of national liberation" headed jointly by generals Charles De Gaulle and Henri Giraud was established formally today to "pursue the war at the side of the Allies until total victory over all enemy powers," including Japan.

Formation of this strong central authority to oppose Pierre Laval's Axis-committed regime and to rally the French masses awaiting an Allied invasion of Europe came after almost seven months' patient effort to bring the two French groups under a single banner.

Signs of tension began disappearing here immediately, replaced by a new spirit of conciliation in all official quarters. Enthusiastic demonstrations occurred as the news spread.

American Minister Pleased
"A baby has been born," exclaimed American Minister Robert Murphy. "I'm delighted with it. It fulfills all our hopes and there is no doubt that there is sincerity in all quarters."

The seven-man committee, which is to be expanded to nine, will direct the French war effort until France is freed and able to elect its own leaders. Besides the co-presidents, Giraud and De Gaulle, the other committeemen are:

Gen. Alphonse J. Georges and Jean Monnet, named by Giraud; Rene Massigli and Andre Philip, appointed by De Gaulle; and Gen. Georges Catroux, named by both presidents.

Make Several Changes

A French communique described the committee as "a servant of the French people," made public a number of personnel changes, and said:

"The committee will pursue in close co-operation with all the Allies the common fight with a view to bringing about the complete liberation of all French and Allied territories, and until total victory over all enemy powers has been achieved."

Committee members said this program included French co-operation to defeat Japan.

At today's session De Gaulle was understood to have subscribed entirely to Giraud's expressed conviction, made in a letter to the Fighting French leader yesterday, that the purpose of the new body was not to build up the personal power of any individual or set up a system which might lead to a totalitarian regime.

During the investigation two negroes were questioned by police but later were released.

Points Increased For All Beef Cuts

WASHINGTON, June 3 (AP) — In an effort to switch civilian tastes from scarce beef cuts to more plentiful pork, veal and lamb, the Office of Price Administration has increased by one to three points per pound the ration-point values of nearly all types of beef.

The order, effective Sunday morning, will make the most popular beef steaks cost eleven or twelve points per pound—a thirty-three to thirty-seven per cent increase. The general level of point values for the other three kinds of meat was little changed, despite numerous small increases and decreases, so that the new order means for people who usually buy beef a choice between eating less meat or switching to the other types.

Insofar as they do not give up beef, the order also means, in effect, a cut in the meat ration. In some families their reduction will be accentuated by the addition of red coupon ration list of canned milk, announced yesterday, and of certain soft cheeses, included for the first time in tonight's order.

The Run-around In Spending

ONE of the ways in which the Washington administration can run around Congress and spend the people's money without specific authorization from it has been pointed out by Senator Byrd.

"The fact is," the senator said in a statement opposing the farm subsidy idea of curbing inflation, "that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and the fifty other government corporations are actually a fourth branch of the government. They are practically independent of the control of Congress except for the original authorization to borrow funds. They do not obtain their funds by congressional appropriations. Funds are obtained either by giving the corporation's notes to the United States Treasury or by selling these notes to the public, guaranteed by the Treasury.

"The disbursement and expenditures of these fifty-one corporations, except for administrative expenses, do not come before Congress for rejection or approval, or even for scrutiny. Most of them, including the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, are not even audited by the General Accounting Office. Congress has no recourse, insofar as recovery is concerned, in the event these corporations make illegal and unauthorized disbursements, except, of course, to hold the heads of the corporations responsible. So far, these fifty-odd corporations have authorized funds for disbursement in the amount of $32,948,000."

And so, when the administration is fearful of going before Congress to ask for a subsidy appropriation, because it knows pretty well what will happen, it goes to these government corporations, as it is going for the purpose of paying a questionable farm subsidy. And thus it is that Congress gets the run-around on willful and reckless spending whereas it should now of all times be giving its attention and concern to the government purse strings.

Regrettable Transfer Of A Capable Officer

TRANSFER of First Sgt. John H. Doud from command of the LaVale barracks of the Maryland State Police to command of the Waterloo barracks is deeply regretted by the people of Western Maryland.

Since Sgt. Doud came here he built up the local force of state police to one of unusually high standards. He is well-liked by everybody, particularly by the troopers at Barracks C. He is no disciplinarian but succeeds in obtaining discipline and co-operation by respect. While no reflection is meant on his successor here, the departure of Sgt. Doud will naturally have an untoward effect upon those who were under his command.

In the brief span of less than two years, the state troopers at Barracks C. have gained a reputation for courtesy, co-operation and efficiency that has not been excelled anywhere in the state. The progress thus made has been traced by persons in authority to the ability of Sgt. Doud.

The year before Sgt. Doud assumed command of Barracks C, not one trooper assigned there was sufficiently skilled with a pistol to qualify as a marksman. Under his guidance, efficiency of the troopers here as pistol shots has advanced to a remarkable degree so that this year nine of the eleven troopers at the barracks qualified, seven of the nine as experts.

But achievement in the line of duty under Sgt. Doud's command at LaVale has been unusual, embracing the apprehension of ten escaped convicts, including the notorious Earl W. Johnson; the arrest of a woman who was convicted for the slaying of her husband; the recovery of much stolen property and the arrest of some fifteen persons in Garrett county for various types of larceny, the rescue of snow-bound mountaineers and travelers, the "breaking" of the Hagerstown gasoline coupon theft ring and many other important cases.

Sgt. Doud thus became an important Western Maryland figure and it is natural that people generally should look upon his transfer as most inopportune and a blow at efficient law enforcement in this area. Considering his value to the area, he ought to be reassigned to LaVale.

Taking Politics Out of War

SEVERAL WEEKS AGO, to take politics out of the war, Chairman Harrison E. Spangler, of the Republican National Committee, suggested that President Roosevelt declare himself out of the race and devote his entire time to winning the war. Mr.

Spangler's proposal came as one New Dealer after another was pushing the president's fourth term candidacy.

Immediately the bureaucrats became alarmed that the "meal ticket" might accept the soundness of Mr. Spangler's proposal. They found seventeen reasons why their jobs should not be endangered. But now comes Chairman Spangler again with clear-cut reasoning to support his contention.

"So long as Mr. Roosevelt continues to be a candidate for a fourth term he will be two people," Mr. Spangler said. "One person is the president of the United States, toward whose office men owe respect and honor. The other person is a politician running for office, rightly regarded as a party partisan. As a candidate he must step down from his high place and subject himself to the disadvantages of any other candidate. He cannot cling to the immunities which properly belong to the president of the United States.

"A candidate has no immunities. While he seeks office he is a private citizen soliciting votes. He cannot have his cake and eat it, too. From the instant he seeks office, he becomes two men: one President Roosevelt; the other Franklin Roosevelt, of Dutchess county, N. Y., a mere man running for office."

"By the speaking of one word," Mr. Spangler added, "the little, two-letter word, NO, he will become everybody's president. By saying NO he will be able to act without fear or favor. President Roosevelt will not have to carry Candidate Roosevelt around on his back."

The next move is up to the president.

Terms Not Wanted For Peacetime

NO REASONABLE PERSON will object to government controls during the emergency. The American public has accepted the dictates of Washington as they have been handed down, willingly and co-operatively. But nowhere in America are the words "directives," "orders," and "controls" popular. War words possibly. Peacetime words in this country—never!

Under the present tightening manpower controls a man is told what he may earn, whether or not he can have a raise, what he can eat, how much he can charge for what he sells, what materials he can have, whether he is to go into the military service or not, whether he is necessary or unnecessary, whether his business is essential or nonessential.

As a result of many Washington controls, millions of people in this country are now in a quandary over their rapidly diminishing rights. Born and reared in freedom, America resents the possibility that a controlled economy may persist, for some indications have pointed to a continuation of such a condition after the emergency has past.

Let us never forget for a moment that this is a republic, that the government of the United States, the state governments, and the local governmental bodies are servants of the people and not their masters. The American people will submit to controls during an emergency but they will never "goose step" to any tune nor will they ever "heel" any dictator.

When war threatens and national unity is paramount in defense against a common enemy, the American people will go over the top, all-out, willingly, enthusiastically. But with victory behind them they will return to their homes, their farms and their jobs as free men with the knowledge that their government is by the people and for the people.

Mussolini no longer urges his Italian followers to "live like lions." The word "lion" might remind them of Africa and what happened there.

There is another theory that the Comintern was disbanded because it has completed the job in the United States.

You Can Know Too Much

By MARSHALL MASLIN

At a very early age I learned that it is sometimes embarrassing to know too much. I'll tell you how it happened.

My brother and I found a mysterious, very heavy jar under a stairway in an old house. . . . We opened it and found it filled with a thick silvery fluid. Our father told us it was mercury, left there probably by some man who used it in his profession. But whoever he might have been, it belonged to him no longer. It was ours and it was TREASURE, just like the gold doubloons that Captain Kidd buried on some forgotten shore.

We could do as we wished with it. . . . We had fun. We dropped coins into it and turned them bright and silvery again. We changed a gold ring to silver. We put some on a hot stove and watched it disappear. We took it to school and rolled it along the pencil grooves on the desks. We traded some for marbles and tops and all-day suckers. And finally, when half of mine was gone, it occurred to me that I might be able to sell it.

So I put my treasure in a bottle one hot day and trudged up and down a business street in our town, in and out of drug stores, asking the clerks and proprietors if they didn't want to buy some quicksilver. . . . The demand for quicksilver didn't seem to be lively and I had little success. . . . But finally one man showed some interest. He said he'd buy it and he put my quicksilver on his scales and told me it was so many ounces, and the current price was so much a pound. He figured it at sixteen ounces to the pound and began to pay me sixty-five cents.

At that instant I learned there are times to talk and times to be quiet. . . . My father had told me that tray weight was used for quicksilver and that it weighed TWELVE ounces to the pound. So I timidly reminded the man that I should have eighty-five cents instead of sixty-five. That made him angry. His face reddened. He called me a smarty. He gave my bottle back to me and told me to get out of his store and never come back. . . . The deal was off and I didn't get any money at all. It was very unhappy.

I still don't know when to keep my mouth shut.

Turning Point Is Seen unless Nazis Push in Russia

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, June 3.—Is Hitler at the end of his fighting rope?

Is the big break in the war in Europe a matter of weeks or months, instead of promised years?

New portents raise three questions now more seriously than ever before. The German radio, for instance, is bleating a new tune lately—claiming the speechless Mr.

Hitler need not have an offensive this summer in Russia after all, that the Reich has switched to the defensive completely, that we, the enemy, must attack.

The Swedish correspondents in Germany have been reporting also along that new line for the past week, and a Lt. Col. Kurt Dietmar was heard broadcasting from Berlin that Nazi blitz-warfare was over and Hitler was switching to the defensive on all fronts.

Decisive Development

If you could pin these facts down as a true indication of Nazi intentions, they would comprise a development as decisive as the fall of Tunisia.

Only a few weeks ago, Hitler in person was blatantly advertising to the German people what he would do to Russia in his next offensive this summer. He was accumulating men, planes and material for it, he said. If his official radio spokesmen are now correct, he has failed.

All through the long winter months, he likewise kept a bridgehead in the Caucasus at heavy expense in lives and guns, solely as an offensive threat, to again try for the oil he failed to reach last year.

Similarly his preparations along the northern front have had an offensive character. The way he has moved his army about this spring suggested clearly he would strike at Moscow, heart of Soviet power.

Upset by Tunisia

The theory that he has given up hope of holding any initiative anywhere can now be sustained by one other significant development. He kept pushing men and material into the lost cause in Tunisia right up to the very end. There is reason to believe he wanted to hold there until July, so he would be free of pressure on that front to organize his summer Russian campaign. This loss of Tunisia two months ahead of his expectations may well have upset his Russian calculations.

There are other good reasons for detecting a major internal German defeat behind the Berlin radio's new propaganda line. Swiss and Swedish correspondents speak of disruption of Nazi industry due to recent bombings.

One has reported that normal execution of Nazi plans is no longer possible. Sub warfare—last offensive stroke of Nazi power—is reported to have been broken off entirely (by War Mobilizer Byrnes).

For the present, this vital apparent turn of affairs must be held under a question mark. But unless Germany shows an offensive in Russia by mid-June, it will be accepted everywhere as a conclusive fact, which heralded the final turn of the war.

Gasoline for Invasion

The revolutionary curtailment of eastern gas supplies (revolutionary as far as transportation is concerned) is accepted everywhere here as a move to build up supplies at European jumping-off places for the coming invasion.

Certainly all the announced non-military excuses have evaporated. The pipeline and railroad flood breaks were mended long before the new order cutting the value of coupons to two and a half gallons.

It is probably true that officials have not efficiently managed eastern distribution of what is left from these new military necessities. Authorities connected with the industry have noted that every time a real famine develops, the government finds gas somewhere.

True also, the mismanagement should bring something like a Baruch committee investigation of the subject, as was done with rubber.

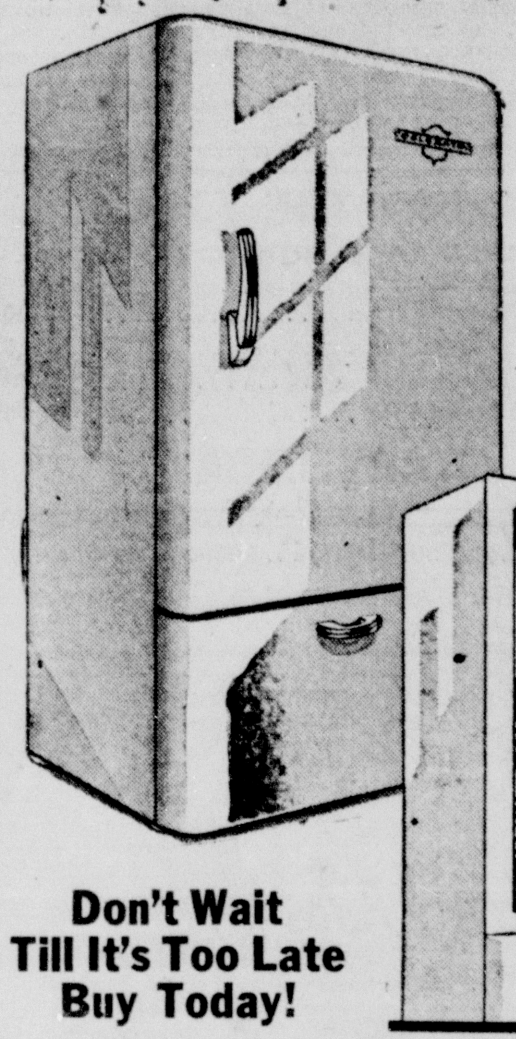

OPA MANAGER?

IT IS REPORTED that Lou R. Maxon, Detroit advertising executive, may be appointed general manager of the OPA. He would succeed J. Kenneth Galbraith, deputy OPA administrator, who directed price controls.

We're Proud of Our Girls!

They're back of the war effort 100%. During the week ending May 29 a War Stamp and Bond Contest was conducted and by their suggestion and persuasion our girls encouraged their customers to buy bonds and stamps. At the end of the week their sales reached $1804.00. The three winners are: Mary Fitzgerald, Delicatessen Department, $389.75; Edith Damley, Delicatessen Department, $261.70; Elaine Boyer, Information Desk, $254.95. We are very proud of these girls and we wish to thank you for your cooperation.

Parents Urged To Cultivate Child's Smile

Youngsters Must Feel Relaxed To Smile, Dr. Myers Says

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

Smiles in children can be cultivated. The loveliest smile comes from the tiny infant when he first responds to your tender tones. No other smile can make a parent feel happier. From the earliest months onward for several years, the smiles of your baby and young child are always beautiful.

But these smiles don't come forth in response to a command that he shall smile nor from a conscious effort on his part. The little child smiles because he feels like doing so. We cultivate his smiling as we cultivate the smiling feeling in him. At this we do best when we foster a smiling feeling in ourselves in the child's presence, especially when we look into his eyes and speak to him as he coos, babbles and talks to us.

Encumbered with our cares, all keyed-up or preoccupied when we know we need not be, we are inclined, much of the time, to hamper the growing youngster's smiles, rather than to further them. We need to relax in order to smile at the child and we need to have our attention and sympathetic feelings turned toward him.

Feeling of Security

The child must feel relaxed in order to smile freely. He doesn't smile readily when tense and excited. Attractive, frequent smiles by the baby and young child are strong signs of a calm, well-poised youngster; signs, too, that he feels emotionally secure.

The tot smiles most often when he feels our affection and we feel his, and when he is creating with things or words. Good health also promotes smiles. Illness and fatigue hamper them. So do irritations. If we would have a smiling child we must find ways of guiding him so he and we will be vexed by each other as seldom as possible.

A strong argument for effective restraints in the young child, even of selective spanking, is that with a few necessary controls established, the youngster will be less annoyed by his parents and they by him.

Fears Destroy Happiness

Fears in the baby and child rob him of smiles, especially fears of ridicule, very early the infant senses the nature of our smiles and responds accordingly. He smiles attractively when we smile, sympathetically and lovingly at him or with him. He soon fails to smile when we laugh at him.

If we want to cultivate attractive and lovely smiling in our child, we should practice poise and right feeling in his presence and sympathetic attention to what he is saying to us. We shall practice at always treating him as a person deserving our respect and consideration, therefore at looking into his eyes as we talk to him or he to us. Smile and your child smiles with you.

Wife Finds War Plant Siren Is Family Threat

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage—Copyright 1943, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

A reader who signs herself "Wife-Trying-Not-To-Nag" (and goodness knows she seems to have something to nag about) writes me of her experiences.

She was prompted to write this letter by reading here that a man got a divorce from his wife because she was unable to work well in a war production plant.

My correspondent describes herself as one who had always been considered "interesting though married." She has kept her figure and her looks, and is more in love with her husband than when they were first married. He has always appealed to women, but has never gone in for anything more than friendship with them, because, as she says "he is an unassuming person and a gentleman to boot."

Siren Enters Picture

Enter the siren. The plant where her husband is employed found it necessary to hire women to work in the shop along with the men.

Soon the husband was telling his wife about a girl who was "interesting, intelligent, a grand sport, etc."—the wife invited the girl to her home, and the first thing she discovered was that her husband and the girl had been seeing each other. A weekend trip, ostensibly taken with the "boys," was in this girl's company.

"I know that women are ruthless when it comes to something they want," writes this wife. "Well, I wanted my husband and my daughter wanted her father. My husband said he didn't love the girl, but the fact remained that she had asked him to divorce me and he asked me to get a job saying the draft would get him. He is 36 and in an essential war industry.

Separation and divorce with plenty of grounds loomed on the horizon. I wept until I was nearly blind. I didn't know what to do. I'd never in my worst nightmare imagined this state of affairs between my husband and me. The wreck of three people's lives—my husband, my daughter and myself. I wasn't considering the girl; why should I? She was 21, a college graduate, a woman drawing down a man's wage. And incidentally, a deeply religious girl, one who condemned the "loose affairs" she knew were going on in the plant between other men and women.

"There are very few eligible men left, thanks to the draft. The man situation is in terrible shape, as far as family life is concerned. I know that many women are working because their husbands are in service, or because they need the money to meet the rise in the cost of living, and some are working to help in the war effort. But the rest are working for money, and have never held a job in their lives.

"It would be very interesting to check on the man you wrote about in your column, who got a divorce because of a nagging wife, and see if now that he is free, he is getting the rest he claimed necessary for his war work, or if he is having a new lease on life with a charming young creature."

What do my readers think of this situation? And to what type of religion does this girl subscribe? She condemns "loose affairs" but doesn't hesitate to break up a family.

Wants To Wear Insignia

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX: Owing to physical disability—a double hernia—I have been rejected for the army after three trials. My friends are all in camp and sometimes I meet girls who are unnecessarily cruel in bantering me because I'm out of uniform. I may be old-fashioned, but I don't want to discuss my double hernia with young ladies. Actually, one of them sent me a box with a white feather in it, which wasn't even original, a certain author having used this for his plot (Continued on Page 11, Col. 2)

Amateur Self-Diagnosticians Use Term "Heart Attack" Too Freely, Doctor Says

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
"A little learning is a dangerous thing." Upon what immortal inspired moment did Pope coin that eternal truth? Nobody is more aware of this than the practicing physician. Nowadays everyone seems to have learned a little medical knowledge. There are several hot subjects for the amateur self-diagnosticians, but none more pertinent than angina pectoris—pain in the chest, heart pang. The medical profession has been discussing it avidly for the last few years, and this has filtered out to all strata of society.

Any business man who falls dead on the golf links has had a "heart attack." In fact, anyone over the age of 30 who dies suddenly at all, unless at the hands of the common hangman, dies of a "heart attack." It may be one of a thousand things—apoplexy, heart stroke, embolism, lymphaticism; but for the sidewalk diagnosticians it is just labeled "heart attack."

This does no harm to the victim but for us, the living, it may have very sad and troublesome consequences. If the taking-off is on the golf links, as mentioned, the other three members of the foursome within the following week develop vague pains around the heart and seek advice from a practitioner who solemnly takes the blood pressure, does an electrocardiogram and makes a pronouncement.

It is a credit to the essential honesty of the medical profession that most of these announcements are reassuring. In these days when the conversational atmosphere is filled with "heart attacks," anybody, any time, may develop premonitory symptoms of dissolution. If he falls into the hands of an even mildly unscrupulous practitioner, he is putty in those hands. He can get the liver and lights scared out of him as thoroughly and rapidly as is ever possible to do so.

I had an instance of this the other day. An old friend of mine had been having some heart pain and had sought advice and was told that the third lead in the electrocardiogram was "suspicious" and that his tonsils should come out. He asked me to check up and even I could tell that his symptoms were not those of angina.

The pain was not pain, but a sensation of awareness, it was continuous, it had no relation to exertion, it did not radiate, it wasn't in the right place. The stethoscopic examination of his heart was all right, and the third lead in the electrocardiogram was pronounced by our hospital expert to be normal. His tonsils could not be found at all, although we sent an exploring expedition after them.

Case Histories
I am induced to bring this subject up by the perusal of an article in a medical journal, just come to hand, which related the case histories of a number of people who complained of angina pectoris when the real trouble was a slight injury in the ligaments of the neck—many of them induced by so slight a thing as the sudden jerking when an automobile started. The crick in the neck was referred to the chest, in the heart region.

Already mentioned in this column is the "slipping rib cartilage syndrome," which is another mechanical bony disorder, simulating angina.

Other imitators are pleurodynia, fatigue syndrome, shingles, radiculitis from spinal arthritis, pleurisy, pericardial rub.

Questions and Answers
S. D.:—You recently recommended Elixir Terpin Hydrate and Codeine for coughing. I have to sign for it at a drug store and wonder whether there is a habit-forming drug in it. Will it hurt a person 75 years old? What would be the proper dose and how often should it be taken?

Answer: Elixir Terpin Hydrate and Codeine has a small amount of codeine in it. It is true that codeine is a habit-forming drug, but not in the amount present in this mixture, as is shown by the fact that it can be obtained without a doctor's prescription. The dosage is one teaspoonful four to eight times a day, as needed.

C. E. E.:—What are the causes and remedies for sciatica? Is it a nervous disease or rheumatism?

Answer: Sciatica is a neuralgia of the sciatic nerve, which is brought on by the same things that cause rheumatism. Treatment consists in the use of heat and massage and is generally successful, although the condition is stubborn.

L. W.:—Which contains more calories, white bread or 100 per cent whole wheat bread?

Answer: Calories per 100 grams: White bread, 248, whole wheat, 241. This is a negligible difference.

Vegetables That Bloom In the Spring, Tra-La

RICHMOND, Va. (AP)—Members of the Sherwood Park Garden Club here have figured ways to make corsages from the produce in their Victory gardens.

This is the way some of the members turned up in their new fashion finds:

Mrs. Martin Williams wore a corsage made of peas and red peppers which were "flowers" on a base made of a cabbage leaf; that worn by Mrs. J. L. Hatcher contained carrots and radishes with a few leaves cut from the shrubbery; Mrs. H. A. Wool-ridge used peas, carrots and radishes, while the corsage worn by Mrs. John T. Ware was made of carrots cut in petals.

They don't look a bit strange, either, the women say.

Dutch Require Deposit On Restaurant Cutlery

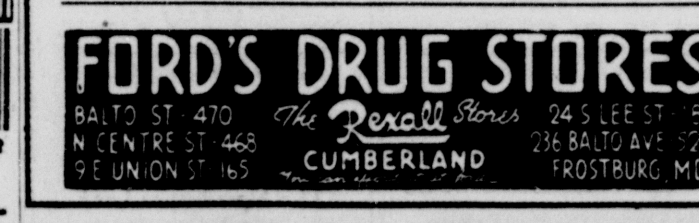

STOCKHOLM (AP)—Guests in Dutch restaurants now must deposit a guinea before they are given a knife, fork and spoon. Restaurants found their cutlery disappearing at an alarming rate, apparently because of the shortage in Holland. Water bottles, trays, even carpets also have been vanishing, the Swedish press said.

Florida is of coral formation, with no high elevation. Chicago has 1,676 churches, 2,200 clergymen.

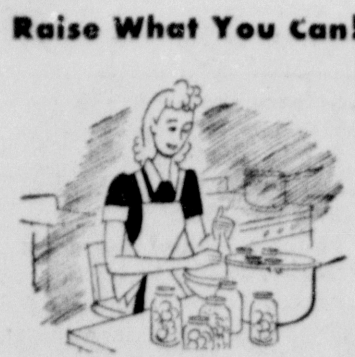

When you present a prescription to a pharmacist, you may be betting your life on his accuracy. Many drugs can be used safely only in minute quantities and these must be weighed and measured with painstaking care. Some drugs have similar names but entirely dissimilar purposes and must not be confused. We appreciate these responsibilities and discharge our professional duties in a way that assures absolute conformance with the doctor's specifications of ingredients and quantities.

Wife Finds War

during the First World War. Though I'm not in uniform, I'm doing a useful job, one that has to do with Defense, and I'm wondering why someone doesn't design an insignia that would protect other men in my position.

HANDICAPPED.

This suggestion has been made several times, but has not been taken up by the government departments that could give the "Go" sign to such a symbol. I believe in your place I'd feel almost tempted to send the cruel young lady a copy of the book to which you refer, congratulating her for depending on her memory for wit. The book, I believe, was called "The Three Feathers" and was by A. E. W. Mason.

Wants To Do Right Thing

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
How can I go about finding a girl I not only love devotedly but feel it would be a joyful privilege to marry? We met at a dance given for soldiers. There really is such a thing as love at first sight, because we experienced it. We were together for two weeks whenever I could get away from the post. We wanted to be married but there were difficulties, insurmountable difficulties, and we couldn't manage it.

After I'd been sent to another post, halfway across the continent, she wrote me she thought she was going to bear my child. I answered immediately and told her to come to me and we'd be married by my chaplain, in whom I had confided. Also, I got permission from my commanding officer. The letter with a check for her expenses to camp was returned to me marked "moved, left no address." Since then I've wracked my brain to find her. I'm almost crazy with worry, fearing I shall be sent overseas and this girl—Heaven only knows what will become of her. What can I do to find her address? Fortunately, I am not dependent on my army pay.

DISTRACTED.

Write to the hostess at whatever organization gave the dance where you met this girl, which was probably a U. S. O. She may be able to trace the girl through some of her friends. Failing that, put a discreet advertisement in the paper. If you don't want to use the girl's name, use her initials and yours, asking her to get in touch with you immediately.

You must know the home-town from which she came and if you ever heard her speak of relatives—aunt, uncle or cousins—it should be comparatively easy to trace her. Also, there are some reliable agencies which specialize in investigating people temporarily off the record. Write to one of these. You might also consult your special services officer who, at army posts, looks after difficult jobs.

Another suggestion is that you try to find her through the Bureau of Missing Persons of the Police Department. The best of luck to you.

Is a Midshipman an Officer?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
To settle an argument, would you be kind enough to tell me if a Midshipman is classed as an officer?

MIDDY'S FRIEND.

Present navy regulations state that "midshipmen are by law officers in a qualified sense."

Girl Has Medieval Husband

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:
I'm a girl of 19 and have been married a year to a man who is ten years older than I am.

He is a successful business man. I have my own home, a servant, nice clothes and furniture. Before we were married he was very possessive, and since we married he is very strict.

My parents died when I was a child, and I've been accustomed to having my own way, but my husband demands obedience. He is very kind, but if I disobey him, he whips me and sends me to my room. He says I am never taught me to control my temper. I admit I have a temper, but no one is perfect. I do love him very much and I believe he loves me.

My husband says he has to teach me to control myself so that I will be able to bring up our children later on, because if I have "tantrums," so will they, and if I don't obey him, neither will they. Do I sound stupid to you? I really am not. I don't want to leave him, but what can I do?

DISILLUSIONED.

Aren't you doing yourself an injustice when you say you have "tantrums?" It seems to me a modern girl finding herself married to a sadistic husband who whips her, sends her to her room if she "disobeys him," would find "tantrums" too mild a term. Wife-beating is illegal in this country, and a high spirited girl would probably have such a husband hauled into court, and the judge would deal with his "tantrums."

As for those prospective children.

how could any woman treated in such a fashion have any control over children? They'd probably despise such a mother. Before the stork pays you a visit, try and develop a little more independence of character.

Girl Declines To Leave Job

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

This is the problem of my girl friend. She works in a place where there are only four other persons. She likes her work and the office is convenient to her home.

The man in charge of her department is married, well educated but has been worrying her with his attentions. It all started when he heard she had been offered another job, which she had no intention of accepting, and she made that clear to him.

Although he does not touch her, when they are alone in the office he talks for hours of his devotion and love for her. I know she has never led this man on, and has always tried to laugh off his declarations of love. Is there anything else you can advise besides leaving this position and accepting the other offer? My girl friend is only 26, while he is 46 years.

E. M. T.

As you've asked me not to suggest the only sensible plan for your friend, what's to be done? Her attitude sounds inconsistent to me. Girls who take this pose that the attention of a married man is distasteful, and then decline to take another job awaiting them, are often secretly pleased by the conquest. However, is there a genuine conquest?

A good many "old boys" go in for this type of mock devotion these days, to keep what is almost impossible to get, a good office assistant.

Higher Learning Goes On in Russia

MOSCOW (AP)—Russian education is being carried on despite the war. Two hundred thousand students have been graduated from institutions of higher learning since the start of the conflict, Spierd Katanov, chairman of the higher education committee, declares in an article in Pravda.

In the past five years, 477,000 students have completed courses in engineering, teaching, medicine, law, politics, science and military science. Many colleges have been evacuated to safe zones far behind the front lines.

Can Germany's Children Unlearn the Nazi ABC's?

"THE NATURE OF THE ENEMY." Militarization of Nazi youth is dramatized in this "tableau-rama," part of the current OWI exhibit in Rockefeller Center, New York.

By ADELAIDE KERR
AP Features Writer

How will the Nazi doctrine be stamped out and Germany re-educated after the war?

That question is of primary importance to you. If the Nazi doctrine had not taken root in Germany, your son would not be fighting a war today. If similar doctrines of oppression are not to take root again, something must be done to prevent it.

So the greatest educators of the world are puzzling over the question (many by government request). And they are producing some varied and interesting answers. None of those to whom I talked think that the United States has the responsibility—or the right—to tackle the problem alone.

Dr. George Counts, Director of the Division of Foundations of Education of Teachers College, Columbia University, believes the terrific job of re-educating Germany can best be accomplished by an agency.

"After the war we need to have some part of international organization," he said. "It has been proposed that one arm of the organization would be an office of education. Such an office might, among other things, concern itself with the problem of organizing education in the conquered countries. If we organize the school systems with democratic curricula that will take care of the children."

Dr. L. L. Kandell, of Teachers College, who prepared an interesting report on postwar education for the Commission to Study the Organization of Peace, has some different ideas on the subject. To begin with he believes that professional educators will have little to do with German re-education "because the army of occupation will have charge of military and civil affairs in Germany."

"The suggestion that educators in the United States be trained to redirect education in Germany or elsewhere is to say the least fantastic," he said. "An International Office of Education could be entrusted to watch over these countries and to furnish advice and suggestions; only educators from within each nation can administer its educational system. A period of transition will be inevitable and could be used to retrain leaders in centers where they can learn the meaning of a system of education under a political organization designed to give effect to the ideals of the Atlantic Charter."

Dr. Kandell points out that we have precedent for such action in the United States' handling of the Boxer Indemnity after the Boxer Rebellion. The money received as indemnity was used to train in the United States Chinese students and teachers who became leaders after their return to China.

Dr. Kandell is not as gloomy about the problem of Nazi Germany's youth as many educators. He points to the recent expulsions of Munich university students as evidence that not all the German youth is imbued with Nazi doctrine.

Mrs. Harrison Thomas, educational secretary of the League of Nations Association, agrees with the theory that Germany should be re-educated through her own educators and emphasizes the need for finding those who have not been corrupted by propaganda.

Add to that list of interesting opinion the ideas of Dr. Walter Kotschnig of Smith College who has also worked with the Commission to Study the Organization of Peace. He believes that the first step toward education reconstruction in Europe will be adequate and intelligent distribution of food, since starved bodies make poor fields for education. And he raises the question whether it might not be wise to begin the re-education of German youth now, by going to work on the young Nazis held in prison camps.

Soil Conservation Meetings Planned In Garrett County

Ten Public Hearings Are Scheduled by John Carter, County Agent

OAKLAND, June 3—In response to a petition circulated by farmers in this county, ten public hearings will be held during the week of June 14, John Carter, county agent, announced. Farmers and land occupiers are eligible to attend, for the purpose of determining whether or not a local soil conservation district should be formed.

Carter has arranged meetings as follows at 8 o'clock and in school houses unless otherwise designated: Friendsville and Avilton, June 14; Accident and White church (Grange hall) June 15; Grantsville and Red Oak, June 16; Bittersburg and Oakland (agent's office), June 17; Swanton and Sunnyside (Grange hall), June 18.

The sentiment expressed by farmers at these hearings will determine largely whether or not the district will be formed here, Carter said. Meetings will be conducted by Carter in cooperation with the State Soil Conservation committee.

E. M. Davis, state co-ordinator of soil conservation service in Maryland, pointed out that most people associated erosion with gullies on hillsides but said there was a much more serious type of erosion called sheet erosion which now confronts most farmers.

Davis added that sheet erosion was the removal of a thin layer of soil with each rain, generally unnoticed. Garrett county farmers are particularly concerned because their soil is not very deep and will stand very little abuse.

Soil conservation districts are entirely farmer-operated by an elected board of directors who must be farm owners. No one will be compelled to go into the program it was pointed out.

Floyd E. Friend, 50, Dies in Hospital

Floyd E. Friend, 50, son of Mrs. Stella R. Friend and the late Joseph F. Friend, Swanton, died yesterday at Charleston General hospital in Charleston, W. Va., May 31.

Va.; Nancy Lee, Floyd, Jr., George Joseph, John Frederick, and one granddaughter, all of Dundon; his mother, Stella R. Friend, Swanton, and the following brothers and sisters: Charles Friend, Grafton, W. Va.; Lawton O. Friend, Atlanta, Ga.; Mrs. Gale Warnick and Mrs. Howard Lowman, Swanton; Mrs. Harry Thrasher, Deer Park; and Joseph Z. Friend, of Philadelphia.

Gasoline Users Warned

A warning to all users of gasoline for transportation purposes to conserve and use their vehicles only for the purpose for which the stamp was granted, was issued this morning from the office of the War Price and Rationing Board in Oakland.

This action was prompted because of complaints received by the board in respect indiscriminate use of motor vehicles were named in these complaints and the board has taken action to warn them against such practices according to W. O. Davis, chief clerk.

All holders of "T" coupon books (transport) were advised that due to the gasoline shortage in this area, their allowance for the second quarter, ending June 30 had been extended to July 25, making it impossible to renew books until the latter date. A cut of 44 percent has been ordered in the allowance shown on the certificates of war necessity for the third quarter ending September 30.

Will Honor Servicemen

An honor roll of the Red House community, containing the names of forty-five young people in the armed forces, will be unveiled and dedicated in the school auditorium Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, a committee has announced.

The honor roll was constructed under the sponsorship of the Red House Parent-Teacher association.

Walter W. Dawson, local attorney, will deliver the address and the program will include a flag salute, patriotic selections by public instrumental selections by Oakland high students; vocal solo by Mrs. Frederick Thayer, Jr., with Miss Catherine Knepp at the piano; selections by the Oakland high orchestra; vocal solo by Wayne Hamilton and the presentation of service flags.

Ocean City's Million Dollar Bridge Ready for Visitors

Reduced gasoline rations and a renewed ban on pleasure driving in the east make it unlikely that many auto drivers will be using Ocean City's brand new bridge and highway this year, but hotel owners at the resort predict a substantial influx of vacationists by bus after the season opens. Rentals of cottages, apartments and hotel rooms were reported normal long in advance of the formal opening. The new bridge and highway, completed last winter, will be in use for the first time.

Lucile Houck Operates Clubmobile for Red Cross in England

Miss Lucile Hilary Houck, LaVale, is one of four Maryland girls operating a clubmobile for the American Red Cross in England, according to a dispatch from Lee McCordell, correspondent for the Baltimore Sun in Great Britain.

The clubmobile is a club room and canteen on wheels, containing books and a photograph and towing a doughnut machine trailer. It can be converted into an ambulance within five minutes in case of emergency.

Miss Houck was a physical education teacher at Allegheny high school prior to her entrance into Red Cross work in February.

State Guard Wins Over K. of P. Team

The State Guard softball team defeated the Knights of Pythias outfit yesterday in a Rocking Chair League game on the Rolling Mill diamond by a 5 to 4 score. The Guardians scored four runs in the ninth inning on three hits and three errors to win. Snowball Heintz's single was the deciding tally.

Rizer, K. of P. hurler, smacked a home run in the fifth with the sacks unpopulated. K. of P. had the game in the bag during the ninth by a 4 to 1 count but the Guardians rallied. Martin and Sapp took care of the batteries for the Guardians while Rizer hurled and Miller caught for the losers.

"The secretary of the interior will continue to operate the mines under the terms and condition of work which obtained under the old contract which was extended by order of the War Labor Board plus those new terms and conditions which have been approved by the board and which were announced in the board's order of May 25th.

Duty of the Miners

"As president and commander in chief I order and direct the miners who are not now at work in the mines to return to their work on Monday, June 7, 1943. I must remind the miners that they are working for the government on essential war work and it is their duty no less than that of their sons and brothers in the armed forces to fulfill their war duties.

"Just as soon as the miners return to work, the disposition of the dispute between the miners and the operators will forthwith proceed, under the jurisdiction of the War Labor Board and in accordance with the customary and established procedures governing all cases of this sort."

Supplementing this, the other regulation said: "The director of selective service notwithstanding any other provisions of these regulations (referring to eligibility for various classifications), may direct that any or all registrants may be classified or reclassified without regard to their eligibility for a particular classification."

Congress provided that all men from 18 to 45 at the time they were registered may be called to active service. The rejection of men thirty-eight or older and those below the physical standards of the armed forces merely follows a policy of the services that could be changed instantly by presidential direction.

It has been accepted in official circles here that local boards may withdraw occupational deferment from any one who ceases to perform the work for which he was granted the deferment, unless he takes some other job equally entitling him to deferment as a necessary man.

Methodists Seek To Ban Liquor From Army Areas

Also Ask Roosevelt To Prevent Sales on U. S. Property

BALTIMORE, June 3 (AP)—Approximately 1,000 delegates to the Baltimore annual Methodist conference voted today to ask President Roosevelt to take action to prevent the sale of beer and liquor in any property controlled by the government, and to create dry zones around all military reservations and industrial establishments engaged in war work.

The conference, at its second-day session, approved a temperance committee report and authorized the committee to send its recommendations to the president and to Congress.

"The United States is now engaged in a war which challenges democratic institutions and threatens the basic liberties of the individual," said Mrs. J. O. Jarboe of Savage, Md., the only woman lay leader at the conference and the chairman of the temperance committee. "The liquor traffic is a non-essential enterprise."

"Fewer restrictions on the use of fuel, gasoline and tires would be required if it were not for waste by the liquor traffic. We recognize and approve such restrictions as have already been made by the government, but believe these restrictions should be extended to include complete suppression of the liquor traffic."

Seven ministerial delegates to the jurisdictional conference were elected at today's session of the conference. New delegates are Dr. John R. Edwards, Dr. R. Y. Nicholson, Dr. Harold Bosley, Dr. R. L. Wood, Dr. A. B. Langrall, Dr. J. P. Hand and Dr. John Ruskin.

D. Stewart Patterson was unanimously re-elected lay leader.

Tigers Wallop Senators 8 to 2

WASHINGTON, June 3 (AP)—The Detroit Tigers exploded for seven runs in the seventh inning to defeat Washington, 8 to 2, before 14,000 spectators tonight.

Rudy York blasted a home run, his third of the season, into the left field stands with the bases empty in the fifth.

Young Jim Mertz, rookie pitcher, was the principal victim of Detroit's seventh inning uprising, but Alex Carrasquel, who relieved him fared no better. The Tigers scored seven runs on four hits, including a triple and a single by Dick Wakefield, three walks, a wild pitch, two stolen bases, an outfield fly and a fielder's choice.

Mertz was charged with the loss. He gave up only two blows in the first six innings. Ray Scarborough walked to the mound when Carrasquel failed to check Detroit's rally in the seventh, and Dewey Adkins hurled the ninth for the Senators.

Virgil Trucks worked six innings for the Tigers and was credited with the win. He was relieved by Dizzy Trout, who held the Senators under control in the last three frames.

Washington scored twice in the fourth on singles by George Case and Bob Johnson, a walk to Stan Spence, two passed balls and an outfield fly.

Events in Brief

The Woman's Guild of Holy Cross church will meet at 6 o'clock Tuesday evening in the parish hall.

A rummage sale will be held at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning in Central Methodist church, George street. Mrs. Frank A. Perdue is in charge and will be assisted by a committee from Group 3.

Guests were members of the First Presbyterian church choir, of which Miss Seebree is director.

FAIRCHILD GUARD SPOTS PRODUCTION SABOTEUR

SGT. FRED H. FORSYTHE, of the Fairchild Aircraft plant protection force, spotted an inanimate production saboteur when he found that over fifty per cent of the oxygen used in welding at one of the Hagerstown plants was being wasted. His suggestion to the labor-management committee that feeder lines from supply tanks be segregated and additional shut-off valves installed resulted in an immediate saving of more than half the oxygen formerly used. He was presented a substantial award at the plant's monthly war production drive ceremony.

Oldest Barber Still Sharp As a Razor

By ROBERT N. COOL

STOCKTON SPRINGS, Me.—The proudest moment in the life of Levi Griffin, perhaps the nation's oldest barber, was on a summer afternoon in 1890 when he shaved Hannibal Hamlin, Abraham Lincoln's vice-president.

Now 88 years old, and as spry with a razor as ever, Mr. Griffin can look back on 65 years of practicing his trade. To his stove-heated wooden shop come aged men—mere youngsters to Mr. Griffin—who received their first haircuts at his hands. They await their turns, alongside barefooted urchins, on the worn wooden bench which faces the antique barber chair. On the walls hang faded notions—and several pictures of Abraham Lincoln.

"I was always an admirer of Lincoln," says the sharp-eyed smiling barber. "Yes, sir, I've read everything about him. I could lay my hands on And Mr. Hannibal Hamlin—I was pretty proud of him. He was a Maine man, you know, and he used to come down here summers."

When Levi Griffin started cutting hair there were no such things as clippers. "But when they came I took to 'em like a duck to water. Oh, yes, they were a wonderful improvement."

The teakettle on the stove in the corner boiled quietly.

"Yes, sir, I like to cut hair," the old man chuckled, wagging his head. "I dunno what there is about it, but if I was to quit I'd hunger for a pair of shears."

A widower who has survived four sons, Mr. Griffin lives alone in a house by the shore. Every day he walks to his shop. Since 1875, he's only been away from his chair for one three-month interlude, when six years ago he slipped on the ice and broke his shoulder.

Despite his years, the octogenarian barber of Stockton Springs is still the best rifle shot in the county.

Two Eras Meet at Belmont, Home of Gari Melchers

Painter Melchers's Home in Fredericksburg

By JOHN SELBY

Associated Press Arts Editor

CHARLESTON, S. C.—The war has returned an illusion to at least one of Charleston's unapproachable gardens, Middleton Place. This is the illusion that the first, and perhaps loveliest, landscaped garden in America has been snatched back from the tourists, and returned to the distant past.

The illusion begins to shape itself as you drive out the Ashley River road, as the live oaks crowd up to the road's edge, and the moss colors the air gray-green.

On the right a cypress fence in which there is no nail appears, and a low gate. On the wide lawn sheep are keeping down the grass instead of a clacking power mower, and besides these not a living creature may be seen. The tourists who used to wander in by the thousand are gone.

You walk through another low gate, and learn that the house you see is only the right flanker of the original. The three-story central unit and the left flanker were burned by Federal troops in 1865; the house remaining was restored a few years ago by the owners of Middleton Place—Mr. and Mrs. J. Pringle Smith.

Now it is plain why 10,000 persons make the 12-mile drive out from Charleston every spring to see Middleton Place. You are standing on the terrace, in front of the broad entrance steps of the main house, which now lead nowhere. You turn, looking down over the seven terraces to the paired "buttery lakes" on the lowest level. You see that 200 years ago a great gardener had an inspiration. For the axis of the terraced garden is continued in a stretch of the Ashley River—from the river you looked up over the wave-like terraces to the great house.

Normally a staff of 34 men keeps the gardens in manicured splendor. Now there are 8 left and these can do little more than rake the paths and remove debris. Mrs. Smith herself is an expert pruner, and spends long hours working among the camellia-japonicas, the azaleas. Last year the Garden Clubs of America presented Middleton Place its highest award of merit.

On the river's edge stands the Middleton Oak, exactly where for 900 years it has stood. Its trunk is 37 feet around now and its branches spread 144 feet.

Nothing moves in the gardens and nothing disturbs the river. The whole place is out of another existence. Carefully, you grind your cigarette into the gravel of the path and start back into World War Number Two.

Desperate Jews Kill 300 Nazis And Wound 2,000

Three-Weeks Battle In Warsaw Finally Won by the Germans

STOCKHOLM, June 3 (AP)—Desperate Jews, defending themselves at barricades in a pitched battle that lasted three weeks, killed 300 Germans and wounded more than 2,000 when German elite troops sought to liquidate the Warsaw ghetto recently, a secret Polish radio station heard here said tonight.

The station, radio Swit, said the action began April 12 when the Germans marched on the 35,000 Jews still left of the original 400,000 crowded in the walled ghetto.

Battle in Streets

The Jews fought at the barricades until April 24. Then street and house fighting began as the Germans pressed in with the aid of artillery, machineguns, flame-throwers and even light bombing planes, the broadcast said.

Blocks of buildings were blown sky high by mines. Sections of the ghetto were set afire.

But even after water, gas and electricity were shut off the Jews continued to defend themselves.

Two thousand Jews fell in the street fighting and 3,000 were killed by the firing, the report said. The Germans, finally winning out, deported 14,000 to the east.

It was the same station that on April 21 broadcast: "The last 35,000 Jews in the ghetto at Warsaw have been condemned to execution. Warsaw again is echoing to musketry volleys."

"People Murdered"

"The people are murdered. Women and children defend themselves with their naked arms."

"Save us . . ."

The station then suddenly went dead.

Its broadcast heard tonight said that during the fighting three thousand Jews arrived in Galicia from Bulgaria, where anti-Jewish action is in full swing. They were headed in the direction of Treblinka in southeast Poland, known as "The hangman's city."

"Rabbi Irving Miller of New York, secretary-general of the world Jewish Congress, asserted in London May 14, that 40,000 Jews had been murdered or forcibly removed from the Warsaw ghetto in the preceding ten days."

"He said the action was taken when the Jews revolted against the inhuman treatment and killed sixty German officers and men."

6,000 Cannery Workers Will Be Needed Soon

BALTIMORE, June 3 (AP)—Six thousand cannery factory workers will be needed in Maryland in August and September and approximately half that number are now available, Lawrence B. Penneman, area war manpower director, said today.

The WMC in cooperation with the farm extension service has drawn up plans for recruiting the necessary workers, Penneman added.

The recruiting will be conducted under a volunteer system, whereby each former employee of a cannery will be contacted by a volunteer and requested to return to the place of his previous employment. Civilian defense committees already organized in the counties probably will do the volunteer contact work, Penneman said.

Every cannery plant in Maryland will be "swamped" at the peak of the season an extension service spokesman declared as 71,000 acres in the state are planted in produce which must be canned.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION

Samuel Lewis Darr vs. Evelyn Darr, No. 12,179 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Allegany County, Maryland. The object of this suit is to procure a decree divorcing the plaintiff A. VINCILO MATRIMONI from the defendant. The Bill states that they were married on the 21st day of December, 1926, and that the defendant abandoned and deserted the plaintiff on or about the 1st day of June, 1932, and declared her intention to live with him no longer, and that such abandonment has continued uninterruptedly for more than one year, and that such separation is beyond any reasonable expectation of reconciliation; that the children were born of said marriage; that the plaintiff has been a resident of the State of Maryland, and the plaintiff asks for an Order of Publication against the defendant and for general relief.

It is therefore this 3rd day of June, 1943, by the Circuit Court for Allegany County, sitting in Equity, ordered that the plaintiff, by causing a copy of this Order to be inserted in some newspaper, published in Allegany County, once in each of four successive weeks on or before the 5th day of July, 1943, giving notice to said absent defendant of the object and substance of this suit, and that such notice appear in person or by solicitor on or before the 21st day of July, 1943, to show cause why she should have, why a decree ought not be passed as prayed.

SYNOPSIS

Notified that her brother, STEVEN MARSDEN, is missing in action, JEAN MARSDEN, who has risen to the top as a fashion model, quits her job to become secretary to STEVE LANDIS, director of a new rubber plant in Mexico. Jean has an abrupt introduction to a carefree, handsome CURLEY, employed by MR. AND MRS. PARKINSON, owners of the Rancho Carolina. Jean appears to have roused the jealousy of ROSITA, pretty little Mexican girl who is in love with Curley.

YESTERDAY: After Curley makes light of his non-participation in the war effort, Jean runs away from him, crying.

CHAPTER EIGHTEEN

LONG AFTER the flood of hot, stinging tears had dried on her cheeks Jean lay on her bed hopelessly wide awake, her mind spinning feverishly in a never ending circle. Odd squares of cold moonlight fell in patterns on the tile floor of her room. The deathlike stillness of the night seemed to crowd down upon her with heavy oppression. She wanted to scream out until her lungs ached, until she felt back from sheer exhaustion.

Over and over again she asked herself what there was about this worthless, irresponsible Curley that seemed to hold her like the firm clutches of a mystic spell? Everything about his character was in direct violation of the code she had established in her own mind long ago that marked a gentleman. And yet, with a carelessly tossed-out word, a crooked, irritating smile, he could throw her into a maddening dilemma. Even now in the darkness of her room she could see his bronzed face, his white teeth, his tawny, black hair laughing down at her, sneering at her misery.

For a long time she lay rigid, cold under warm blankets, her eyes wide and staring until she could bear it no longer. Suddenly she swung her blankets from her, swung her feet to the cold tile floor, and with fingers that seemed stiff and awkward managed somehow to get into her clothes.

She crept noiselessly down the hall, past the Parkinsons' room, through the living room and out into the patio. Against the sharp night air that swept down from the mountains she wrapped her polo coat tightly around her and, with her hair blowing wildly about her white face, she turned her steps toward the sea.

The road was no more than a rutted track, used mostly by Miguel's high-wheeled ox-cart. The ruts were deep scars in the soft earth. Between them grew rank, dusty weeds that brushed Jean's bare legs as she half-walked, half-ran, between the tall, stilt line of eucalyptus trees. It seemed to be a wild race between her whirling brain and her pounding heart that would soon, she felt sure, jump completely from her breast.

A half mile of this grueling pace and she felt the quieting hand of physical exhaustion touch her. A relieving calm swept through her mind and body like a fresh wind. A welcome numbness seemed to envelop her senses and suddenly all the thoughts that had rankled and tormented her seemed unimportant and far away. Like waking from a dreadful nightmare to find that it was all a phantasm of the imagination! Somehow it didn't seem to matter what Curley did or thought. Her mind was back on the rational track!

She slowed her steps and drank deeply of the crisp night air. Her hands buried in her pockets, she swung along, abruptly conscious of the beauty of the night. She could hear the heavy pounding of the sea now as it dashed black walls of water over giant rocks and then quickly ran away again only to be momentarily caught up and flung back in unrelenting fury. Her mind turned back to Steve and the genuine fineness of him. He was like those sturdy rocks that stood unflinching in the face of whatever might be hurled at him. He was fine and good, a real credit to his country, doing his job day after day, solving real problems, doing real things that counted now and always would count.

For an instant she almost wished she could cherish a feeling of true love for Steve instead of only deep admiration. She had really tried. That night when Steve had taken her for a drive and they had stopped on a wind-swept hilltop she had caught for an instant the surge of emotion that she knew was sweeping through him as his arm had crept cautiously, almost timidly around the back of the seat, and she had instinctively pulled away. Afterward she had hated herself for it, but at the time—

It was all wrong. The pattern of her life was growing bizarre and out of shape. She had shunned the awakening interest of a man who was true and fine and given her lips willingly, almost urgently, to one who was—she said it half aloud, "Rotten to the core."

Her feet had carried her up a gentle rise to a narrow path that rose abruptly from the sea. A gentle breeze had sprung up. It carried the tangy smell of salt to her nostrils. Her hair was blowing back from her face in a misty cloud, her feet dipping into soft grass wet with ocean spray.

She was enjoying the peaceful solitude of the night when suddenly the quietness was rent with the deafening roar of a powerful engine not far away. Jean stopped in her tracks, her eyes straining to pierce the curtain of night, but no lights were visible. She broke into a run, her feet touching only lightly on the winding path. And then she stopped. Far below, the faint edge of moonlight caught the polished brass rail of a speedboat, its engine barking savagely, its dark form moving slowly out to sea.

Jean stood transfixed, her eyes trying to make out a figure bent over the wheel, but the curtain of darkness was too thick. The boat was moving cautiously, and without the sign of a light. The thought came back to Jean, then, that Steve had said no private boats were allowed to operate for the duration of the war. It couldn't be a government patrol boat then, because they always had red and green running lights.

She watched the black hulk move out until it was swallowed up in the night. Then she turned her steps back toward Rancho Carolina. She hadn't taken time to put on her wristwatch, but she knew it must be very late. Maybe three or four o'clock, but she felt no urge to hurry. She walked slowly, her mind completely absorbed now with the mystery of the boat.

She could see the dim outline of the sprawling hacienda as it slept on its hill and she felt sleep weigh heavily on her eyes as she walked the last few hundred feet. She went quietly to her room and slipped noiselessly out of her clothes. The bed felt wondrously soft and comforting to her tired body now and she was no more than settled until sleep had overcome her and her room was left to the quiet of the night and the fading squares of moonlight on the tile floor.

Mrs. Parkinson waited until seven-thirty the next morning before she decided that Jean had overslept and stepped to her bedroom door. She rapped several times before she heard a sleepy response. "It's seven-thirty, dear. I was afraid you would be late for work."

"Thanks," Jean called, at the same time leaping from the bed. She hadn't ever remembered sleeping so soundly. It only seemed a moment ago that she had tumbled in and pulled the soft blankets snugly under her chin. She dashed cold water on her face and it was then that the sight of the boat moving in blackness out to sea came back to her. She'd mention it to Mrs. Parkinson at the breakfast table. Then Steve's sharp warnings flashed back to her mind about the Parkinsons. While she still couldn't believe it, maybe she had better wait and see. Maybe one of them had heard the engine, would say something about it first.

By the time Jean had dressed, run a brush hurriedly through her hair and put on a few quick touches of makeup it was ten minutes to eight. She walked quickly to the dining room where the Parkinsons already were eating. Between gulps of steaming coffee, Jean munched thin, crisp brown toast.

Nothing was said about the boat and while Jean was wheeling the station wagon down the winding track of road toward the plant she debated in her mind whether or not to mention the incident to Steve. Just as she whirled in through the company gates she said to herself, "I think I'll do a little investigating tonight on my own before I say anything about it to anyone."

Working In "Corregidor" Like War, Says Kruger

It was last December 7—the anniversary of Pearl Harbor—that they started work on location for the P.R.C. epic historical drama, "Corregidor," which is currently appearing at the Maryland theater.

Otto Kruger, starred with Elissa Landi, tells how Director William Nigh had them start out at 5 o'clock in the morning for Sherwood Lake, about forty-five miles from Hollywood. "That's just to get the players in the proper mood," said Bill Nigh with a sly wink, "for the tough events that take place in the drama of Corregidor."

It sure was tough, conceded Kruger. They were working steady till almost 10 o'clock that night, with time out of course for lunch and supper.

When they got up in the morning to start on location, it was pitch dark—and cold. And a December morn in California can be awfully dark and cold, but don't tell the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce that we said so.

As the company started back in a big bus, tired and feeling exactly like the exhausted soldiers at Corregidor whom they were depicting in the production, Otto Kruger summed it up for all of them when he cracked: "Anybody who quits this kind of work to join up in the army is just a coward!"

Russell Hayden Stars In Western Film

Action fans of every age are certain to get a thrill when they see "Saddles and Sagebrush." Columbia's newest pulse-pounding adventure film, at the Embassy theater. Starring Russell Hayden, hard-riding, two-fisted star of the western range, the outdoor thriller also features the tuneful ballads of Bob Wills and His Texas Playboys.

Directed by William Berke, "hoss op'ry" veteran, "Saddles and Sagebrush" was penned by Ed Earl Repp and according to advance notices, is just the kind of story Hayden fans like. As the film opens, the likeable cowboy has gained entrance into one of the toughest bands of outlaws west of the Mississippi.

Of course, his only intention is to get information about the bandits so that they can be convicted legally. But the better citizens of the community are unaware of this fact and later, when Hayden tries to convince them of his honesty, it is said to take quite a bit of convincing.

Roy Rogers Stars In Garden Film

Repair ships in the U. S. Navy are named for characters in Roman and Greek mythology.

Trucks and Tractors To Use Wood Power

BALTIMORE, June 3 (AP)—State Forester Joseph F. Kaylor announced that trucks and tractors of the department of state forests and parks may soon be powered by wood instead of gasoline.

Kaylor said he proposed to utilize, as a means of helping to alleviate the gasoline shortage, some of the 45,000 cords of tops, small growth and weed trees that annually go to waste on Maryland's 2,223,000 acres of forest land, as fuel.

The state forester said the wood could be converted into motor fuel by means of a small distillation plant operating as the vehicle moved along. Sawdust fed from a container would be converted into charcoal, the fumes of which, in turn, would be compressed to propel the motor.

Hens and Roosters Are New Guests at Embassy

LONDON (AP)—The United States Embassy's newest acquisitions are fourteen hens and one rooster. Endeavoring to improve the egg situation, the embassy sent a call to the Russian countryside and bought its fifteen newest employees. Lieut.-Commander Johns Young has been put in charge of egg production. He found a home for his charges in the backyard. Now the embassy is impatiently awaiting the first fruits of the experiment.

Yankees Defeat St. Louis by 2 to 1 Score

Muncief Walks In Winning Tally in the Ninth Inning

NEW YORK, June 3 (AP)—Manager Joe McCarthy shook up the batting order of his New York Yankees today and though the changes scarcely could be said to have put the bomb back in the bombers, they did win.

The margin of their 2 to 1 triumph over the St. Louis Browns, however, was a gift run in the ninth inning after two were out. Charley Keller received credit for a double when rightfielder Mike Chartak misjudged his fly and he moved to third on an infield out. This caused Bob Muncief, the Browns' pitcher to load the bases with two intentional walks and gave him a bad habit. For, after fanning Nick Eiten for the second out, he lost his control entirely and served four consecutive wide pitches to Bill Johnson to walk in the winning run.

New York's other tally came in the second on a pair of singles by Bill Dickey and Eiten and altogether the Yanks made only six safeties off Muncief. John Lindell was moved into the cleanup spot and Joe Gordon dropped to sixth, but both went hitless.

The Browns were held to four blows by big Ernie Bonham, but one of these was a home run by George McQuinn in the fifth to tie the score.

The victory, Bonham's fifth against two defeats, protected the Yankees' slender American League lead against the Washington Senators.

Pirates Defeat Giants 9 to 6

PITTSBURGH, June 3 (AP)—The Pittsburgh Pirates made the better use of their hits today in a slugging session with the New York Giants and walked off with a 9 to 6 victory although the Giants had an 11 to 10 edge at bat.

The Buccaners went into the front in the first inning with a run on one single and two errors, scored four more in the third, three of them on Johnny Barrett's triple with the bases loaded, and continued with two in the fourth and two in the fifth.

Behind this barrage Rip Sewell was able to breeze to his sixth victory against one defeat, although Johnny Lanning came to the mound in the ninth to get the final out, fanning John Rucker, after a pinch single by Van Mungo had counted New York's last two runs.

Chalky Wright And Terranova Battle Tonight

Winner Gets Chance at Featherweight Title of Willie Pep

By SID FEDER
NEW YORK, June 3 (AP)—Chalky Wright and Phil Terranova tangle in Madison Square Garden tomorrow night for a chance to get a crack at the world featherweight championship—and now the professor will please explain, "what featherweight championship?"

For, the 126-pound title set-up, as it is put together at this moment, represents a combination of "button, button, who's got the button" and the old army game of trying to pick the pea out from under the right walnut shell.

As a matter of fact, the agreement for tomorrow's 15-round ruckus calls for the winner to get a shot at Wee Willie Pep's world championship (as recognized in New York). The only thing wrong with that picture is that Wee Willie meets Sal Bartolo in Boston for the crown next Tuesday night—and just suppose Sal takes it away from him?

Well, that's not going to make much difference to the New York State Athletic Commission. The Empire State's sage swat solons have said they wouldn't recognize Tuesday's tussle as a title affair.

This line of reasoning naturally won't confuse the customers much. Isn't Boston "way up there in New England," they'll figure? That's a long way from New York, as the "A" gas coupons go, so perhaps the New York fistic fathers feel this is the exception to the rule that "distance lends enchantment." Or, as the National Boxing Association asked on hearing of the New York Commission action, "isn't Boston in America?"

So, the ageless Chalky, who insists he's not old enough to remember the battle of San Juan Hill and Young Phil, a long-armed local (Continued on Page 17, Col. 5)

Williams Wins Tri-State Conference Batting Title with Average of .568

Allegany Slugger Collects 21 Hits in 37 Trips; Drenning, Brant Tie for Second

Bobby Williams, who did a lot of shortstopping for the Allegany High Campers the past season and who now is wearing a Queen City Brewer uniform in the Pen-Mar League, easily won the Tri-State Interscholastic Baseball League batting championship for the 1943 campaign with an average of .568.

Stepping up the platter thirty-seven times, the hard-hitting Williams collected for twenty-one hits, scored thirteen runs and was charged with five errors affixed. Two Fort Hill players, Earl Drenning and Ed Lowery, finished in a deadlock for second place with .433 averages, each getting thirteen hits in thirty attempts.

Lou Skidmore Fourth
Lou Skidmore, of Beal, who took fourth with .429, led in runs with fourteen, one more than Williams. Bill Raupach, of Allegany, was fifth with .382; Lewis Baker, Allegany, sixth with .375; John Cox, of Allegany, and George Cook, of Hyndman, tied for seventh with .370, and James Pick, of Hyndman, and "Lunk" Norris, of Beal, tied for eighth with .360.

During the first half of the ten-game season, Williams drove out thirteen safeties in twenty trips for a .650 mark but his average fell off during the stretch. Elmer Lashley, of Beal, second at the half-way mark with .500, slumped to .300 during the final five games, while Joe Carter, of LaSalle, who shared third place with .444, dropped down to .294.

AHS Led in Runs, Hits
Norman Geats, who registered three victories with no defeats for LaSalle, was the only unbeaten hurler. Gene Gilpin and Herman Brant, who did all of the pitching for Fort Hill, each scored four triumphs against one setback, while George Geatz, of LaSalle, and Ritchie Middleton, of Beal, finished with five-two records.

LaSalle and Fort Hill ended the race in a tie for first place but Allegany, which wound up in fourth place, led in runs, with eighty-six and hits with ninety-eight. Hyndman was charged with the most errors, forty, and Fort Hill with the fewest, twenty-one.

LaSalle scored four more runs than Fort Hill but the Sentinels collected eight more hits and had five fewer miscues. Individual batting and pitching and team records for the season follow:

The SPORT TRAIL

NEW YORK, June 3 (AP)—Danny Litwhiler ran and ran, and after while he caught up with the St. Louis Cardinals. And caught on with them, too.

Which means the Phil outfielder recently traded to the World champions literally kicked up his heels to make himself wanted by the Red Birds. Sure, he's a dangerous hitter, but Johnny Mize is a dangerous hitter, too, and the Cards didn't hesitate to get rid of him.

Litwhiler, however, has something else. He has that running complex that is so much a part of the makeup of the typical Cardinal, and we have a hunch the trait had as much as anything to do with bringing about the trade.

It all dates back to Sept. 13, last year. The Cards had moved into a tie with Brooklyn the day before by defeating the Dodgers on Whitey Kurowski's home run, and had moved down to Philadelphia for a series.

It was the first game of a double header, and Johnny Beazley had the Phils shut out for eight innings, 1 to 0, and had retired one man in the ninth, when Litwhiler came up. Danny hit a blower out along the right field foul line. Three Red Birds converged on the ball, and Jimmy Brown, trying to make the catch, stumbled and the ball dropped safely.

Now here was Litwhiler, playing on a club that was hopelessly out of everything, and with the chances pretty fair that if he did get on base he would be left stranded. The natural tendency would be to loaf down to first, and if the ball wasn't caught, it would be a lucky break, that's all.

But with the crack of the bat Litwhiler started digging. He rounded first under full head of steam and tore for second, sliding in for a double.

The next batter singled to center and Litwhiler, still in high gear, headed for home. Terry Moore came in fast to retrieve the ball, and kept his throw to the plate low as the tendency is to overthrow on such a play.

The ball hit the pitching mound, and instead of hopping skidded toward the waiting Walker Cooper. He had to field it like a fast roller, and just as he got it Litwhiler hit him, knocking the ball loose. Litwhiler was safe, but he was out, cold, in fact, and had to be carried to the bench.

That was enough for Billy Southworth. He'd seen his kind of ball player, a guy on a losing team giving everything he had to the last. We have an idea he's had his eye on Danny ever since.

Similarly, Earl Naylor, another Phil in the Litwhiler deal, probably got in on it through heads-up baseball. In a Card-Phil game early this season the fleet Stan Musial tried to go from first to third, as is the Red Birds' wont, on a single to center. Naylor fielded the ball and with a perfect peg nailed Musial by such a margin it was ridiculous.

During the rest of the game Southworth could be seen periodically pausing in the coaching box, putting hands on hips and eyeing the Phil center fielder speculatively. He's probably never noticed the guy before, but could just imagine his musings:

"Hmm, Naylor, heh . . . caught Musial by a mile . . . quite a wing, quite a wing . . . we might be able to use him sometime . . . Naylor . . . looks okay to me."

We won't go into the merits of the deal from a Phil standpoint, except to say we don't think we'd trade a ball that we knew could bounce for two or three that maybe could and maybe couldn't. And that Litwhiler really can bounce around.

St. Louis Browns Sign Conzelman For Front Office

Will Be Assistant to Prexy and Public Relations Director

ST. LOUIS, June 3 (AP)—The last-place Browns got some help today—in the front office—with the signing of affable Jimmy Conzelman as assistant to President Donald L. Barnes and public relations director of the American League Club.

In making his venture into baseball, Conzelman resigned as vice-president and coach of the Chicago Cardinals of the National Professional Football League. He will take up his functions here June 10.

Barnes said he and Vice-President William O. DeWitt believed that "Conzelman's background in athletics and business and his national reputation in the field of public relations would make an excellent addition to the Browns' organization."

Conzelman at a press conference was a bit vague about his duties but suggested his sports contacts would prove valuable in helping the Browns line up young players.

There was only passing mention of the fact that Conzelman also would be assistant to the president and public relations director of Barnes' American Investment Company of Illinois, which operates several small-loan agencies.

He will have his office with the Investment company, rather than at Sportsman's Park, home of the Browns. Presumably, his principal work will be in public relations for the holding company, which has been involved in legislative investigations of the small-loan business in Missouri and Illinois.

Conzelman is one of the most versatile personalities in the field of sports. In addition to playing actor and radio commentator, he has been a boxer, writer, newspaper publisher, salesman, painter of pictures, composer, and coach of both college and pro football.

Philadelphia Whips Indians 10 to 4

PHILADELPHIA, June 3 (AP)—Ripping into Joe Heving and their teammate, Chubby Dean, for 18 hits, the Philadelphia Athletics skidded the Cleveland Indians into sixth place this afternoon by taking a 10 to 4 victory.

Don Black, who had been given a local anesthetic before the game to overcome the pain of a sore back, held the visitors to one run until the ninth inning, when an abortive rally produced three runs.

Bobby Estalella, Athletics left fielder, was hit on the head by a pitched ball in the eighth but remained in the game. Earlier, outfielder Henry Edwards was bruised when he collided with Jeff Heath.

Dodgers Lead Is Cut to Half Game As Cubs Win

Chicago Wallops League Leaders 8 to 1 in First Game of Series

CHICAGO, June 3 (AP)—The Brooklyn Dodgers, all puffed up about winning the final game of their St. Louis series, busted into the Windy City today and promptly had the wind taken out of them by the last place Chicago Cubs.

The Bruins bagged an easy 8 to 1 victory, which, coupled with the Cardinals' 8 to 2 conquest of the Phillies, reduced the Dodgers' National League lead to a half-game. Old Lon Warneke, beaten three times this spring without a single victory, smothered Brooklyn's superbas on six hits and had them shut out till the eighth, by which time Chicago had the game clinched.

His teammates, making a total of 13 hits, gave him two runs in the first inning when Ed Head walked the first two batters and both scored as Phil Cavaretta singled and Bill Nicholson hit a long fly.

In the third Eddie Stanky walked and Nicholson hit his fifth home run in six games. Head then gave way to Les Webber, who was tapped for two more runs in the sixth when Lou Novikoff singled with the bases loaded. Kirby Higbe came to the mound in the eighth and gave up the two final runs, the last being Dom Dilessandro's steal of home to add to Brooklyn's humiliation.

PITTSBURGH WINS FEATURE RACE AT CHARLES TOWN MEET

CHARLES TOWN, W. Va., June 3 (AP)—Mrs. J. H. Elliott's Pittsburgh, winner of eight races last year, turned in a sparkling effort today to win the Standard Purse which featured the racing program at the Charles Town track.

With Apprentice Jockey R. Fitzgerald aboard, the five-year-old finished five lengths in advance of J. Fred Adams's Wesley A, with Mrs. Anna M. Brockman's Curregal third in the best pocket field of five going about seven furlongs.

The winner was clocked in 1:26 3-5 and returned $8.60 for $2 to his backers at the mutuels.
 Pittsburgh, in winning his second purse of the year, shook off Glorene to take command throughout. Wesley A and Curregal closed boldly to fill out the money bracket.

Maxims Before Methusalem
 From all opponents, praise or blame is something I ignore—reject. All that I ask from any game is their respect.

As long as I have done my best, and maybe, just a little more, I've never bothered in the test about the score.

The Next Port

The Fleet—better known as Count Fleet—is now sailing for the next port. The next port is the Belmont at a mile and a half—the toughest test for both stamina and speed on the part of a 3-year-old.

The Wood—the Kentucky Derby—the Preakness—the Withers—and now the Belmont.

This is something no Man o' War, no Sir Barton, no Gallant Fox, no War Admiral, no Whirlaway, no Albas, no Exterminator, ever crammed into the records.

There are those who will ask the oldest question in sport—"Who or what did he ever beat?"

They have been asking that in the wake of Man o' War, Jim Jeffries, Jack Johnson, Jack Dempsey, Gene Tunney and even Joe Louis.

One answer is that Count Fleet has wrecked the spirit of what might have been a pretty fair three-year-old collection.

When a horse as a two-year-old can run a mile under 1:35—when he can romp a mile in 1:36 over a slow track, eased up, with 13 in sight, he is just a little bit too much horse for anything in sight.

I doubt that even those who believe Man o' War is still the all-time top would feel any too sure that Big Red, now dreaming in his old Kentucky Home, could handle Count Fleet in the 1943 Belmont.

The one thing that can beat Count Fleet is the number of ills and ailments that can wreck a thoroughbred, an animal subject to more mishaps than any competitor in sport.

Chalky, who once held the crown until Wee Willie won it running away last December, is a 2 to 5 favorite.

Comedy Program Will Pay Tributes to Fighting Men and Girls

By C. E. BUTTERFIELD
NEW YORK, June 4. (AP)—For the remaining five broadcasts in its present CBS schedule, the Comedy Caravan out of Hollywood is to take the form of a series of salutes to Uncle Sam's fighting men and girls. In doing so it will use talent from various outstanding network shows as the guests.

The first on Friday at 10 p. m. will be in tribute to the army and the WAACS. The entertainment will be supplied by Bob Hope and his troupe, appearing with Xavier Cugat's band.

This change resulted in the transfer of Jack Carson, who had been the M. C. to a Wednesday night

Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPE

First Aid in the Victory Garden

By DEAN HALLIDAY

Certain vegetables in the Victory garden will do better and occupy less space if they are given first aid in the form of supports or braces.

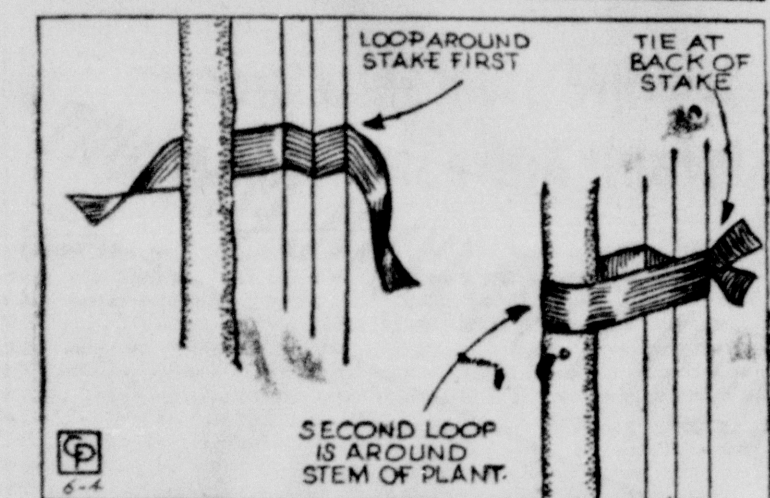

Tomatoes, for example, if permitted to grow at will and sprawl all over their section of the garden must be planted not closer than three by four feet. On the other hand, if they are trained to grow upon stakes they can be planted two feet apart, and three feet between rows.

If you plan to use stakes as first aid for certain plants, place them before you plant the seed or set out the plants, since the roots of the plants may be badly injured if the stakes are driven into the ground after the plants have become established.

As illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph, when using a plant to a stake make a loop of the tape or cord around the stake first. Then loop the tape or cord around the stem of the plant, as illustrated, and bring it back to the stake. This double method of tying furnishes a loop in which the plant can stand upright without being bruised or pinched. The knot should be tied against the stake, as illustrated, and not against the plant stem.

Do not bunch the foliage together when tying up a plant and always allow room for additional stem growth of the plant. No not use wire or hard twine for tying purposes for fear of cutting the soft stem of the plant. Raffia, green twine or tape are the best materials to use.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

DON'T FORGET THIS ONE

A SIMPLE little play, which often is overlooked by fair players, but has set many a No Trump contract for more expert cardsmen, is one violating the old injunction to refrain from "finessing" against your partner. It is employed when your partner had a fourth best lead from his long suit, and found you in third-hand position with three cards, including the ace and the queen or jack, or perhaps the ten. Putting on the ace may make the declarer's plan simple, commanding a hold-up of the king on the next trick, whereas use of the intermediate card may ruin him.

What a cinch this contract would have been, after West led the spade 5, if East had played the A on that trick. South would have ducked the return of the Q, holding up his K, and then would have scored the K on the third trick. Next he would lose the club J finesse, and East would have had no spade to return. Anytime a declarer, who could then have scored a total of four tricks in clubs, three in diamonds, two in hearts and a spade, making an extra trick.

But East did not play his A or the opening spade. He used the Q instead. Now South was afraid to let East hold the trick, for fear that the K would be trapped by a return of the suit toward the A, probably held by West. Consequently South came in with the K on the first trick. Now his entire contract depended on winning the club J finesse. When it failed, East scored the spade A and returned the 10, West overtaking with the J and running the rest of the suit.

Of course, if South played low on East's spade Q, he could have made his contract. But how many players would have done so? Would you? If so, would you consider that sound?

Swedish Airplane Runs On Wood Gas Generator

STOCKHOLM (AP)—Sweden, where automobiles operate on woodgas, now has a sports-plane powered by charcoal.

Hugo Ericson of Tandbyn reported that a single-seater plane which he designed himself could be operated by a 20 horsepower motor using either gasoline or woodgas. The generator for woodgas weighs about 35 pounds and holds charcoal for 15 to 20 minutes of flying, Ericson said. The plane, with a fuselage of welded steel tubes. Wings are made of wood. The ship cost $125 to build.

CHAPTER NINETEEN. THE DAY had been hot and tiring, filled with nagging emergencies that arose from the mass hiring and final equipping of the plant.

Mrs. Parkinson, waiting in the cool plot, took one look at Jean and cried, "You poor dear. You're exhausted. Go up and pop into a tub of water and I'll send you up a cold drink."

Gratefully Jean obeyed. The warm water drew out the aching weariness of her limbs and iced limeade refreshed her.

"As usual," she called to Mrs. Parkinson, when the latter came in to wait for her on the chaise longue in her bedroom, "your recipe for reviving did the job."

"It's shame you have to work so hard," Mrs. Parkinson said. "Nonsense! It's wonderful we're getting so much done!"

"So things are going nicely at the plant."

A warning bell rang in Jean's brain as she opened her mouth to confide their progress. She said instead, "I don't know really about the thing as a whole, but Steve and I seem to be getting out of it."

She had tried not to be too discouraging. She should be drawing out the other woman's questions. But she was intensely relieved that Mrs. Parkinson's curiosity seemed to be satisfied.

When Jean came into the bedroom, wrapped in her white Turkish robe, her hostess held up some sketches she had seen in the Ventura about our costumes for the fiesta," she said. "She's still determined to make them as she pleases, but she did grudgingly draw some rough ideas of them for us."

Jean studied the wide-skirted, peasant-waisted sketches with interest. "I've always loved Spanish costumes," she said. "These look positively ravishing."

"I do think they're lovely," Mrs. Parkinson agreed. "She promises they will be authentic as well as becoming. And she's even giving you a choice between ribbons and embroidered braid or both."

She laid samples of brilliant Mexican embroidery beside bits of colored ribbon. Gayly they discussed them, made their choices.

"I'll take them to her first thing tomorrow," Mrs. Parkinson promised as she rose to leave. "Now for a cool tub myself. See you at dinner, dear."

Jean dressed leisurely in a cool-flowered organza, and wandered down to the patio. And as she felt the first cool evening breeze with the tang of the ocean, in it, she remembered again her strange adventure of the previous night, and the unknown boat. She had not told Steve. In the rush of factual office routine, an unknown, even unlawfully-run boat seemed an inconsequential matter. Perhaps it had been the Coast Guard cutter, anyway, although she was sure once again that it had a different sound.

into the cafeteria, workmen said. Windows and skylights in damaged and adjacent buildings were shattered.

Many residents of Cumberland, in their homes and down town, reported hearing the terrific blast and said they first believed it was a long roll of thunder, but word of the explosion spread quickly as ambulances, fire equipment and police sped to the scene with sirens screaming.

Crowds gathered on the streets to watch ambulances speed the injured to hospitals. Other crowds gathered at vantage points in the vicinity of the plant to watch the activity.

Firemen Arrive Quickly
Ambulances of local funeral directors, the state police ambulance, and the city police patrol as well as the Celanese plant ambulance rushed to the injured to the hospitals and then returned to the plant for more victims of the blast.

Crescent moon and two city fire companies rushed to the plant to help the firm's fire fighters in combatting the fire. State police under the direction of Sgt. Truman Moon and city police headed by Chief Oscar A. Eyerman hurried to the scene to furnish all possible aid, and Small said last night he wanted to express his appreciation to them and to physicians who hurried to the plant to provide medical attention.

City police were rushing to the scene within three or four minutes after word was received at headquarters of the explosion and Desk Sgt. George Deffenbaugh said all available officers on the force were on the job within fifteen minutes. He dispatched policemen to the plant in the city cruisers, the patrol wagon and the officers' own private cars.

Auxiliary policemen of the civilian defense organization helped keep traffic moving on Greene street and made clear paths for vehicles bearing the injured to the hospital. The civilian defense casualty station in the Coca Cola plant on Greene street was opened with three nurses on duty.

Veterans of Foreign Wars, members of the American Legion and the Maryland State Guard companies were standing by in case they were needed.

At the plant, nurses and doctors gave first aid as rapidly as injured were carried to the first aid station from the blasted buildings. Employees became stretcher bearers and carried their injured fellow workmen to the first aid station for treatment.

People Offer Assistance
Small said he received scores of telephone calls from people offering their assistance.

Allegany hospital attaches said the sudden rush of patients taxed their facilities to the limit and patients voluntarily gave up their beds for victims of the explosion. The hospital was so crowded that it was necessary to set up extra beds in the corridors to care for the injured.

Victims admitted to Allegany hospital all suffered cuts and burns of a more or less minor nature, attaches said, with the exception of the three men seriously injured.

In addition to those three, men admitted to the hospital were: Russell Keister, 27, Route 5, Cumberland.

John Lindner, 26, 17 Schiller terrace.

Samuel Whetstone, 32, 72 Hill street, Frostburg.

Joseph Bender, 30, 617 Montreal avenue.

Ellsworth Warnick, 25, Barton street, Frostburg.

Walter Rank, 30, 155 Centre street, Frostburg.

Curtis W. Bowers, 27, Hyndman, Pa.

Robert Shaffer, Hyndman, was treated at Allegany hospital and then discharged.

Ten Enter Hospitals
Ten victims of the explosion were taken to Memorial hospital for treatment but all were discharged with the exception of the seriously injured Stafford.

Men treated at Memorial hospital for minor burns and slight cuts and bruises and then discharged were: Robert Arrington, 27, 1132 Myrtle street.

Leo Cavey, 31, Eckhart Mines (freighted no treatment).

Robert F. Dicken, 26, Valley road.

Joseph A. Johnson, 51, 11 Altamont terrace.

Artie Martin, 35, 972 Maryland avenue.

Elmer Moore, 16, Hyndman, Pa.

Eugene Rowan, 25, 442 North Mechanic street.

Wayne Lough, 18, 127 Ormond street, Frostburg.

Clifton Shirey, 27, Welsh hill, Frostburg.

Names of the injured who received treatment at the Celanese first aid station were not learned.

Farmer Says OPA Rules Violated

Complains that Dealers Refuse To Give Stamps for Farm Butter

A laxity in the manner of collecting stamps for the sale of butter in the George's creek section was reported yesterday to Karl W. Radcliffe, chief clerk of the Cumberland War Price and Rationing Board, by Ralph F. McHenry, county farm agent.

McHenry's communication was accompanied by a letter from a George's creek farmer who complained that dealers will not furnish ration stamps for sales of butter. He added that farmers from Garrett county bring in butter and don't accept points for the product, and urged that McHenry advise the OPA office of these violations of regulations.

The county farm agent requested that the OPA look into this case and advise dealers that they are guilty of black market operations when they refuse to pay stamps for farm butter.

Robert E. Barnard, manager of the Cumberland field office of the OPA, announced yesterday that the case has been brought to his attention, and an immediate investigation will be conducted.

CAP Is Ordered To Meet Tonight

Will Have Dress Rehearsal for State-Wide Mobilization

All members of the Cumberland Civil Air Patrol are ordered by Commander Arthur Lyman to report in full uniform tonight at 7:30 o'clock to the Civil service room in the Post office building, for dress rehearsal and detailed instruction prior to participation in the state-wide mobilization in Westminster tomorrow and Sunday, June 5 and 6.

It is expected that about six planes will fly from the Cumberland airport for the mobilization, while others will fly from Hagerstown, Taneytown and Frederick.

The local patrol will compete with other Maryland units in competitive drill by squadrons and flights, and will participate in review and inspection by the national commander, Col. Earle Johnson and wing commander of the Maryland CAP, Maj. Arthur C. Hyde.

Among those attending the mobilization which will take place at the dedication of the new airport in Westminster will be Civil Air Patrol and air corps officers from Washington, D. C., and Baltimore. The events will be under the command of the United States Army Air Forces.

STATE GUARD UNITS RECEIVE EQUIPMENT FOR SUMMER CAMP

Equipment for the summer training camp at Fort George G. Meade, which opens July 24 for a period of two weeks, was received yesterday by Companies C and D, of the Maryland State Guard, from the Quartermaster department, Fifth Regiment armory, Baltimore.

The equipment includes fifty crash helmets, fifty haversacks and fifty new cartridge belts.

Fifty gas masks for each unit were received here recently.

The local companies each have openings for ten recruits. Men sixteen to fifty will be accepted.

Knights Templar Will Observe Ascension Sunday

Antioch Commandery, No. 6, Knights Templar, will observe Ascension day with services Sunday at 2:30 p. m. in the Masonic Temple, Greene street, according to Blair V. Welsh, eminent commander.

All Master Masons and Royal Arch Masons, with their families, have been invited to attend this service which will be in charge of the Rev. William A. Eisenberger, assisted by Rev. Dr. Walter M. Michael, and with music by Dr. and Mrs. W. E. Caspali.

A holy day of obligation for Catholics, Ascension day was marked by extra masses in all local Catholic churches yesterday.

Robert Schleunes Is Honored by Telephone Company Employees

Representatives of the plant, commercial and traffic departments of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company entertained in honor of Robert L. Schleunes with a farewell dinner last evening in the Gate Tea room.

After dinner talks were given by Schleunes, who has been promoted to Western Maryland district manager and will leave Monday for Hagerstown to assume his duties, and Joseph Cromwell, the new local manager, who arrived here Wednesday evening and will assume charge Monday. Miss Beatrice Ritter served as toastmaster.

Merchant Marine Issues Call to Men Between 17 and 50

Ensign A. M. Sebastian, Recruiting Officer, Will Be Here Today

Ensign A. M. Sebastian, recruiting officer in this area for the United States Maritime Service, will be in Cumberland today, and issues a call to men between seventeen years and six months and fifty years of age to enroll in the service.

Ensign Sebastian, who arrived last evening, stated that any man who is within the age limit and who can pass the physical and other examinations will be sent for initial instruction to the United States Maritime Service Training Station, located at Sheephead Bay, N. Y., in the rank of apprentice seaman.

He added that these enrollees will then be later assigned to the school for which they have shown preference if they pass the aptitude and necessary tests. These schools include training in radio, hospital corps, clerk-typist, steward's department, and engine department.

During the preliminary training and advance training period the student-seaman will receive $50 a month and will be supplied with food, clothing, text books, medical care and other facilities of the station.

Radio school applicants must have two years of high school and one year of algebra. Hospital Corps clerk-typist applicants must be between the ages of eighteen and thirty-five and possess a high school education. Any man interested in the steward's department will be given a course of only six weeks' training. He will be subjected to a limited physical examination.

All men who are interested in sailing in America's Merchant Marine are urged to visit the local United States Employment Office, public safety building, or contact the United States Maritime Service, Room 110, Chamber of Commerce building, Commerce and Water streets, Baltimore.

LIEUT. FRANCES MENEFFEE IS IN NORTH AFRICA WITH ARMY NURSES

Lieut. Frances V. Menefee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Evans Menefee, 712 Maryland avenue, is serving with the United States Army Nurses Corps in North Africa.

According to a letter received by her mother here, Lieut. Menefee praises the work of the Red Cross both for the soldiers and for the nursing corps, and describes the life of the army nurse in the fighting areas as wonderful experience.

Lieut. Menefee is a graduate of the Allegany Hospital School of Nursing and did post-graduate work at Lying In hospital, New York city, and Rotunda hospital, Dublin, Ireland. She was supervisor of obstetrics at Allegany hospital here for twelve years.

She was inducted into the army nursing corps in 1940 at Indian-town Gap, Pa., and served on maneuvers at Fort Bragg, N. C. Prior to her transfer to overseas duty, Lieut. Menefee was stationed at her induction post at Indian-town.

Boy Suffers Burns As Match Ignites Leaking Gas Line

"Sonny" Jacobs, eight-year-old son of Mrs. Margaret Jacobs, 302 Columbia street, is recuperating from first degree burns suffered Wednesday when another boy tossed a lighted match into a manhole from which gas was leaking near the corner of Knox and Columbia streets.

Burned about the legs when the gas ignited, Jacobs was treated by a local physician. He was seen on the street yesterday, smothered in bandages, relating his experience to a group of youngsters of the neighborhood.

Three Persons Are Injured

Three persons in addition to ten Celanese explosion victims were treated yesterday at Memorial hospital for injuries suffered in accidents.

William Dorsey, 29, of 305 North Mechanic street, an employee of the Oklahoma Pipeline Construction Company, suffered a broken little finger of his left hand while working on the "big inch" pipeline near here.

Donald Sherwood, 10, of 700 Yale street, suffered a lacerated foot which he cut on a piece of glass while swimming. Leroy Cover, 12, of 323 Pennsylvania avenue, suffered a fractured left wrist while playing ball on the Penn avenue school grounds.

Mercury Climbs to 96 Degrees, Highest Mark Of Year in Cumberland

Yesterday was the hottest day of the year in Cumberland as the mercury in the health department's thermometer atop city hall jumped to ninety-six degrees, four points above Wednesday's maximum of ninety-two degrees.

The previous high for the current season was ninety-five degrees on May 19.

Correspondence from school children of Salford, England, has arrived at the office of Charles L. Kopp, superintendent of Allegany county public schools, and a perusal of these youngsters' letters reveals many interesting sidelights from the blitzed communities in the British Isles.

"In the 1941 blitz," she states, "our school was hit pretty badly; the church was burned too but we soon got straight again and we now have our church services in our large hall."

"It was three days before Christmas in 1941 when the warning siren wailed about 6 p. m. I was at my aunt's and I took no notice as we were used to getting them. Soon the usual routine started, bombs falling, guns booming and flames dropping."

"At 7 p. m., I announced my intention of going home as there was a lull in the raid. When I reached home my family and neighbors were seated around the fire playing card games and I joined them. At 8 p. m., the raid started in real earnest with bombs falling every second. About 12 o'clock I lay on a camp bed and went to sleep. I seemed to have been asleep only a few minutes when I awoke just in time to see the lights go out."

"Then without warning, the walls caved in like paper and a heavy weight fell on my leg, then plaster, paper and bricks came showering down and I don't remember anything else until I heard some one shout 'there should be two more.'"

"My grandad and grandma were killed that night. We soon got over it, however, and laughed at the sights we saw."

"There are some terrible things in this war but one of my minor troubles is the rationing of sweets. Before the war I used to have a lot of them. Now I have to limit myself to three quarters of one pound a month. But still I suppose it's all for the good of the cause."

Another interesting letter is from Annie Lockett, also a student of St. Ambrose school.

"My family and myself never thought we would celebrate my brother's wedding on the cellar steps, but we did," she states.

"However, that did not dampen our spirits, for, towards the end of the raid, we all sat on the floor and ate the top tier of the wedding cake. That was the Christmas blitz of 1941."

"Your soldiers in England are making quite a change in the English language. 'Yanky twang' is getting quite well known, and the women of Britain are getting used to being called 'dames.'"

"I have always wanted to visit America and see the skyscrapers, the Rockies and the wide open prairies. My mother said that with the number of wide open spaces in Salford, I should stay near the skyscrapers. However, I may land there some day."

"I would like you to understand what England is like in war time," Doreen Lomas writes. "It must be very different from your country for you have not experienced air raids and I hope you never will."

"In the blitz of 1940 on Manchester and Salford it was terrible. Bombs were dropping everywhere and we could hear the German planes machine-gunning the streets. We were in the shelter sirens as loudly as we could so as to drown the din that was going on outside."

"But please don't think that this has broken our spirit because it has not. Nothing can make us give in till we have cleared the world of that terrible enemy, Hitler, with the help of you, our friends, and allies."

"On May 13 I am taking the test for child nurse badge for which you have to know a child's time table for a day, do some sewing for a child from two to five years, wash and iron a garment for a child, take two toys to amuse a child for one hour and know all about food. I think in America you call us Girl Scouts."

"For my War Service badge I put in ninety-six hours at a war-time nursery. The mothers who do war work can leave their children there if they are under five years old. The mothers pay one shilling a day which is equivalent to a quarter of a dollar."

"The mothers can leave their children from 7 a. m. to 8 p. m. The children are looked after by nurses and have everything they need. In the afternoon they go to sleep for three hours."

Miss May Appleton, headmistress at St. Ambrose Girls' School, states that letters are being written by the seniors of her school to Allegany county school children, and that they would be delighted to have replies.

Boy Injured in Fall

Edward Ralph Martz, 12, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward P. Martz, 781 Fayette street, was admitted to Allegany hospital Wednesday night with severe head injuries suffered in a fall at play. He was swinging on a wire and fell on a rock when the wire broke.

Army Engineers Study Local Flood Control Situation

To Submit Plan to Congress, Federal Representative Says

United States Army engineers are still working on studies of the flood control situation in the Cumberland area and will be ready to submit a well-co-ordinated plan for congressional action in the near future, Harold A. Kemp, federal representative in the Inter-State Commission of the Upper Potomac River Basin, told local delegates at a commission meeting held in Romney yesterday.

Kemp's comment was made in a discussion by the commission of what is being done to abate and control pollution in the streams of the Potomac Valley conservancy district and the problems relating to the situation. Cumberland's plans for the future were taken into consideration, since, as local delegates pointed out, sanitation and disposal of industrial wastes must be inherent parts of municipal planning.

Upper Potomac Board Praised
The commission was addressed by Edwin R. Cotton, engineer-secretary, who explained to the delegates the duties of the commission, explained its purposes and gave them some idea of the work that is being done. He expressed appreciation for the work done by the Upper Potomac River Board, composed of the city of Cumberland, the Potomac Edison company, the West Virginia Pulp and Paper company, the Celanese corporation and the Kelly-Springfield company, since its organization in 1929.

Cotton also promised that the commission would support whatever steps are taken by Cumberland officials toward municipal planning.

No Final Plans Made
Yesterday's meeting was devoted largely to orientation and preliminary discussion. No definite plans were made. It was decided that investigations relative to final recommendations will be conducted and action is to be taken at a later meeting.

The commission was created two years ago by a compact between the District of Columbia, Maryland, Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Virginia, with the federal government also a signatory.

Besides representatives from the industries named, attending the conference were Harold W. Smith, Charles J. Bruce, Dr. Winter R. Franz, Mayor Thomas P. Conlon, Miss Mary Clay and Mark Roe, city representatives; Simeon W. Green, John H. Carscaden, Horace P. Whitworth and James Holmes, county delegates.

WIVES AND MOTHERS OF SERVICEMEN ARE HONORED AT MEETING

A dinner meeting was held last night at the Salvation Army Citadel honoring wives and mothers of men in the service. Brigadier Mrs. Charles Dodd, Baltimore, divisional home secretary, was the guest speaker.

The program opened with Mrs. Winona Stimler leading in prayer. A song, "What Friend We Have in Jesus," was sung and two readings by students of Fort Hill high school were presented. Miss Lois Hanks read "In Good Hands" and Miss Stetler read "Miss Dorothy Entertains the Minister."

The feature of the program was the presentation of a four-foot V carried by three girls in Life-Saving Guard uniforms into which each child for one hour and know all about food. I think in America you call us Girl Scouts."

Miss Gale Phillipson played "Onward Christian Soldiers" as two Salvation Army members marched into the hall carrying the American flag and the Salvation Army flag. Mrs. Adeline Hyde, home league secretary, presented the flags to the Corps. The assemblage sang "America" and benediction was pronounced by Brig. Brice Phillipson. Mrs. Delphia Shadwell, secretary to the South Cumberland Home League, was presented an award for planning the program.

Commission Will Meet Today

To organize and dispose of preliminary details, the Planning and Zoning Commission named Monday by the mayor and city council will meet today at 1:30 p. m. at the city hall.

Nathan L. Smith, former chief engineer for the Maryland Roads Commission, will attend the meeting. Members of the commission are Harold W. Smith, J. William Grove, Dr. Thomas W. Koon, Fred T. Small and Mayor Thomas P. Conlon.

The entire student body will receive Holy Communion and the graduates will be guests of the Alumnae at the annual communion breakfast in St. Peter and Paul hall, following the Mass.

County Farmers Receive Certificates for AAA Potato Payments

Certificates qualifying them for special Agricultural Adjustment Agency payments for growing Irish potatoes and truck crops are being mailed by the county agricultural conservation committee to all Allegany county farmers who have filed 1943 farm plans. These certificates must be signed by the farmer and returned to his county committee before July 1.

This year the special AAA payments will be fifty cents per bushel for Irish potatoes and $50 per acre for truck crops. Payments will be made on that part of the acreage of the individual farmer between ninety and 110 per cent of his war crop goal, and in the case of potatoes, on the farmer's normal yield.

Woman Files Suit Against Her Sister

Charges Her with Failure To Provide Proper Care for Children

Charging her with failure to provide proper care for her four minor children, Thelma Jones filed a bill of complaint against her sister, Dorothy Miller, in circuit court yesterday.

The bill states that Mrs. Miller, whose husband, Orville J. Miller is stationed with the United States Army in Washington, has four minor children, the oldest 6 years and the youngest 3 years of age. Since her husband has entered the service, her sister charges that Mrs. Miller has neglected her children who are without proper care and have been placed with strangers.

The defendant's conduct is also condemned by her sister who says that Mrs. Miller is not a fit and proper person to have the custody of the children, that she is using government allotments for riotous living, and now maintains her home in what was a chicken coop.

The plaintiff asks that the defendant be made to answer the charges and show evidence why the children should not be delivered into the custody of persons under the jurisdiction of the court, since it would be detrimental to their welfare to permit them to remain in their mother's care.

A court order was issued by Associate Judge William A. Huster directing the defendant to appear in answer to the charges on June 15 at 10 a. m. Edward J. Ryan is attorney for the plaintiff.
